- 5. Helsinki and Vienna: Since AELADLE was able to furnish names or identifying information for this category, SMIMPEDE stated he has about fourteen specific cases thus far which will be given intensive investigation. He feels it possible that this may result in uncovering three or four agents from the fourteen cases.
- 6. SIMIPEDE stated that he believes it fortunate that the AELADLE defection occurred at this time because it is bound to have a definite long-term value in the tightening up of British security practices which he felt were very insufficient. He bemoaned the fact that he does not yet have a clear cut case (resulting from the AELADLE material) to table at this time to add further support to the recommendations made by the Radcliffe Committee.
- 7. When FELS discussed the AELADLE case with him on 5 June, (SMIMPEDE) was still under the impression that AELADLE was refusing to talk. Having been so informed by FERNICH that very day, FELS told (SMIMPEDE) that AELADLE was again cooperating. (SMIMPEDE) would like at some time to talk once more with AELADLE to review the information developed so far; in fact, let him in on the whole investigation in the hope that this will jog his memory and stimulate him to further revelations.
