See no UFOs, Hear no UFOs, Speak no UFOs:
A million little accumulated choices reflect our true essence
Commentary on JAR 4 Editorial

Decades past, I, a Lab tech at KC Waterworks, a fellow employee had just come from Ann Arbor, Michigan during the great “swamp gas” episode—April ‘66—and he told me a funny, sad story.

The height of the flap, that region, early summer evening, a neighbor lady is out in her front yard, mowing grass. Suddenly, several people began hollering, “Look! Look! It’s a UFO!” as two diamond-shapes flew by at low altitude.

This neighbor took one hard look at the objects, which did little zig-zags, put her head toward the ground and with resolute, determined steps, hurried inside her house as she said, over and over,

“I don’t see anything, I don’t see it, I don’t,” and she slammed her door going inside.

Tragedy and comedy commingle in the willful avoidance of the United States’ and many other countries’ populations. For I believe a determined, collectively aroused population would be irresistible. It would have organized such facts no government could stand the scrutiny resulting.

Example, if a major UFO organization petitioned on a large, large scale, billionaires over and over until real money began to build real truth-gathering and telling tools, then . . .

Such a robust effort as several dozen well-paid, equipped teams would be roaming Texas day and night with time-correlated stamped pairs of high definition camcorders, telephoto lenses, motion stabilized platforms, low light amplifiers.

Theirs would be video not easily faked and without millions of dollars of expenditure. Videos of such power and majesty it would likely result in key insiders deciding it is time to call a truce with Truth itself.

The three "See nothing, Hear nothing, and Speak nothing" monkeys are joined by a fourth monkey with his hands under posterior saying, "For Simon's sake, don't do anything! Maybe they'll go away."

So, nothing has changed in decades. Slight glacial drift, but the fundamental rot, basic corruption of a system that depends on an informed and self-informing electorate, has deepened and widened into a mass pathology of towering denial and "know nothingness."

We, citizens of the United States, pretend we have a Republic and our public service folk pretend to inform and consult and listen with high attention and respect. A Diabolical Quid Pro Quo, that reminds one of some bird species with head in a pile of dirt and sand and their assumptions sticking skyward.

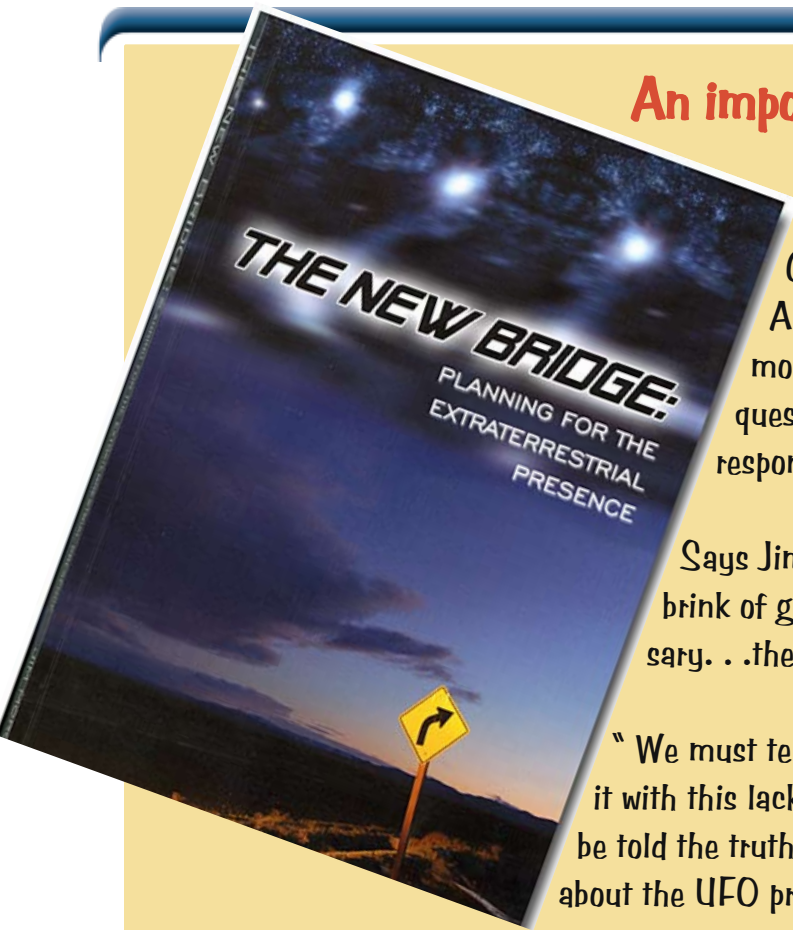

This pathology will change the day real numbers of people demand a different government and not indulge every possible artful dodge. I have neighbors who never miss a multi television hour blend of febrile, twisted humor, or episodes of adolescent locker rooms on television, yet will not open a single book on UFOs or deal with a reality of those who are taken and returned, leaving abductees with few options.

Most have no time for those who have been abducted, in a "Couldn't have happened," or "We don't have time for this disturbing stuff," but do have time for great continuous swaths of every form of fake "reality" show, or tired, stale sitcom around.

Increasingly, it seems, whether a nation, or a single person, a million little choices add up to a mirror that reflects our true essence. Your JAR 4 editorial a reminder of the great change that will be demanded as the walls surrounding the secrecy archipelago crumble.

Letters to the Editor

After reading the Editorial in JAR 4, "For the time being, that's the way it is," about the human reluctance among many to venture beyond disbelief, I was prompted to subscribe.

That loathing fear of the general populace is not innate to mankind. It is acquired. The psychic blocking mechanism behind it can be removed.

An indication of that is found in the pursuit to grasp reverse speech when we discover reverse speech expression is represented in metaphors from classic myths common to all cultures. But these 'myths' are frozen in time to a period we associate with wars of conquest in which even the gods participated.

Taking a look at how the science fiction of the west today reaffirms such garbage, even though it is preposterous to consider star travel folk would behave in the Indians and cowboys fashion they are depicted, we have to acknowledge that our most primordial of fears are being appealed to in a way that is ruinous to our facing contact.

I'm very glad to be receiving each new issue of JAR. Please don't give up your good work! And it's admirable your policy is to include articles from differing points of view. This field has suffered in the past from too much fragmentation into narrow, separating, ideologies.

Paul Brett, Massachusetts

Read the editorial in JAR 4, "The way it is. . ." Apparently the Editors agree with me, as I have long pointed out that the root problem here is what I call the "self cover up." UFOs is a subject no one really wants to know is real because it is too "all powerful." The "True UFO," or Alien Flying Craft (AFC) will affect many (if not almost all) facets of human life. The desire to have these "go away" results in what I call the "self-cover up" as evidenced by the reaction of the roommate. UFOs are Real, so if you are told there is one in the sky. . . don't look!

JAR Apologizes

JAR apologizes to ufologists John Lear, Budd Hopkins, Dave Jacobs, Derrel Sims and John Grace ("Val Valerian") for a paragraph including their names which appeared in JAR 2 in the article "Findings about the real Star Visitors. . .," by Richard Boylan.

The paragraph insults the named individuals and impugns their integrity and should not have been included in the article. Elaine Douglass, JAR board editor, should have removed the paragraph. It is not the policy of JAR to print gratuitous attacks on the reputations of ufologists. Elaine Douglass apologizes to the persons named.

Report on alien abductions and the Thought Screen Helmet by inventor Michael Menkin

mmenkin@hotmail.com

ABSTRACT Can a hat lined with the industrial anti-static material Velostat block the electromagnetic signals aliens are apparently beaming into the brains of abductees? Michael Menkin has invented the Thought Screen Helmet to prevent alien abduction, and he provides the Helmet free to abductees willing to wear it.

“It’s the worst thing that’s happened to the human race,” says an abductee I know. “It’s an alien invasion.” He was referring to a phenomenon which started around 1890—the taking of human beings by aliens from space.

From what qualified investigators such as Prof. David Jacobs have found, there is a race of aliens from a distant planet, with advanced technology and the ability to control human minds, which has found its way to the earth and is preying on our race.

From what we have been able to learn, the aliens are taking both men and women and using their reproductive materials, eggs from women and sperm from men, to make a new race which retains key alien mental characteristics and is able to live on our planet among us.

This process is clandestine. The aliens do it in secret and are able to erase the short-term memories of abduct-

Dealing with the abductions and the alien presence has been made more difficult because all the governments of the world, with the exception of Belgium, are hiding it. Since alien activity is seen all over the world in the form of UFOs and as encounters on the ground, all governments must be aware of this activity, but to what extent they are aware we really don’t know.

Our knowledge of alien activities is confounded by investigators who may be confused, who may have wishes of what they would like aliens to be, and by those who proees. Most remember little of what transpires during their encounters. The aliens are doing this all over the world.

It appears the aliens plan some final event, at which time they will dominate and control all of the human race. That is why I invented the Thought Screen Helmet—to give abductees a way to protect themselves against being taken by aliens.

Threat to the human race

The survival of our race on this planet depends on how we deal with this phenomenon. Can we effectively combat alien activity? Since there are many, many abductions taking place worldwide, it is plain that so far the human race has had little success in stopping the aliens. The Thought Screen Helmet is my small contribution to solving a very big problem.

Accepting the weirdness coming through dimensional openings: Hunt for the Skinwalker pulls it all together

John Carpenter, MSW, LCSW
Carpenter2655@aol.com

As a boy I was fascinated by reports that ordinary people were possibly encountering real flying saucers and little beings from other worlds. It impressed me that the incidents were written like newspaper reports—serious, with interesting details!

Through the years I followed these occasional headlines or magazine articles, trying to accumulate knowledge on this incredible subject, always hoping for more clues about who they are and what they are doing. I hoped, like most people, for simple answers and interesting details.

Little did I know the phenomena reported by the newspapers were the tip of the proverbial iceberg! Nor did I realize there is not any simple answer and the details are mind-bending and bizarre—beyond science fiction.

Hunt for the Skinwalker describes scientists' efforts to document supernatural events on a remote ranch in a beautiful section of Utah.

I hoped to figure it out

When I became a UFO researcher in 1988, I was already a psychiatric therapist and hypnotist. I was determined to collect data in a factual, non-judgmental fashion so I could clearly see what people were claiming to experience. I also knew—due to my training in mental health—that I should be able to spot mental disturbances or attention-seeking behavior.

I hoped that by getting all the details, and not just what would be written about in books, that I might get a fresh look at the information and be able to draw my own conclusions from the raw data. And of course, as a counselor, I would be there, emotionally, for my clients.

Plenty of weirdness

As people began to learn of my research and trust me, they told me about incidents they did not want to share with anyone else, and in some cases had not discussed for as many as 40 years. It was amazing how much “weirdness” they had had to suppress because they live in a world that would laugh at their encounters. They were relieved that somebody—especially a professional—would listen and seriously consider what they had experienced and suffered, physically, emotionally, and spiritually. And it was not just flying saucers and little green men!

Some data doesn't fit

Like other researchers, I found myself collecting “weird data” I did not expect or know what to do with. Sometimes I felt a strong desire to toss the absurd stuff, figuring it couldn't possibly pertain to the UFO field. But what is “too weird” when it comes to the UFO field? Where do we draw the line?

The line is drawn according to a researcher's beliefs and comfort level. I tried very hard to never draw that line and throw nothing out, and it was very difficult. Researchers get excited when patterns begin developing in data, when matches and similarities occur repeatedly. It must mean something! But what? Some of the patterns we did not want to see.

It became clear to the scientific team an omniscient presence was in control of the strange events, and if anybody was being studied and manipulated, it was the researchers! Despite their clever efforts and scientific instrumentation, the phenomena presented itself at will and in a clever, calculated, and chilling fashion.

Is Bill Holden a free man?

By Elaine Douglass, MS.
edouglass@preciscom.net

ABSTRACT This article explores the evidence, direct and indirect, that abductee and insider witness Bill Holden may have been the unwitting subject of secret government psychological experimentation while he was in the Air Force.

The author is grateful for the assistance of C.B. Scott Jones, Bill Holden, Bob Brown, Bill Ryan, Grant Cameron, Bob Dean, Melinda Leslie and Bruce Maccabee in preparation of this article.

Two times in 1966, while Bill Holden was serving in the Air Force, the US government took him places and showed him aliens and alien craft and humans fraternizing with aliens at military facilities. Bill was not told in advance these things were going to happen, and he was not given any explanation afterward why they had happened.

Later, in 1971, Bill reported to his commanding officer that he had been abducted by aliens. The Air Force responded to this information in a nonchalant manner and gave Bill information on other abductions of military personnel.

Bill left the Air Force in 1977, and although he said nothing publicly or privately about the UFO events which occurred while he was in the service, in 1995 Laurance Rockefeller invited Bill Holden to a private gathering to describe these events.

After that, Bill began to speak publicly. He came to the attention of Bill Ryan and Kerry Cassidy who present a June 2007 interview with Bill on their website www.projectcamelot.org.

Another experiment on an abductee

I got interested in Holden because his case reminded me of Kevin Marks, whom I wrote about in JAR 3 and JAR 4 in the article, "Don't go for an interview at the CIA. . ." Kevin Marks is another person the government showed aliens to without any explanation why they did it.

Both Kevin and Bill are abductees; probably that is a clue. I don't know how important it is that at the time of the events, neither of these men knew they were abductees. Evidently the US government did know, though, and that is important.

In my article on Kevin Marks, I suggested the reason the government put a non-human in front of him was as a test or experiment to see how an abductee would react to such an event. Likewise for Bill Holden, but Holden's case may represent a longer-term and more complex experiment.

US interest in abductees

Bill Ryan put me in touch with Holden, and I interviewed him three times by telephone in the winter of 07-08. He is a very nice man, and I believe truthful in all he told me. As I look at this case, two things stand out: the government's blatant actions, and Bill's incurious response.

Comparing the case of Bill Holden with that of Kevin Marks, from what I know about Kevin the only time the US government exploited him was when Kevin, at his own initiative, applied for a job at the CIA and somebody decided it would be fun if Kevin was given a lie detector test by a hybrid. Following that apparently opportunistic event, the government seems to have had no further interest in Kevin and abandoned him to the tender mercies of the aliens.

By contrast, Bill Holden was in the Air Force for 15 years, an abductee, near at hand, available for experimentation over a long period of time. Since we know the US government knows who at least some of the abductees are, the government might have known that about Bill Holden even before he joined the Air Force. Or, they might have discovered it when he joined.¹

MILAB investigators, such as Melinda Leslie² and Katharina Wilson,³ tell us the US government has a

Don't believe it!

By Elaine Bickle
voicesechoes@yahoo.com

Wait! Give me a chance to explain before someone blows a gasket!

I am a geologist and a biologist. I have been investigating what are termed “paranormal” events for over 40 years. By the time I was a teenager, I had experienced so many “paranormal” events the investigations became necessary for my sanity.

Before we go farther, I need to make some definitions. I’ve seen people argue for hours only to find out later they were using two different definitions for the same word.

SCIENCE The orderly investigation of the evidence of phenomena.

SCIENTIST The person who conducts the investigation of the evidence.

SKEPTIC The person who makes a decision only after examining the evidence.

ORTHODOXY This can’t happen, so it isn’t happening. The evidence is not examined.

ORTHODOXIST The person who shouts that something isn’t happening, but doesn’t examine the evidence.

TO BELIEVE To Believe in something implies one is doing so simply because one wants things to be that way. The person disregards all evidence.

BELIEVER I want things to be this way, so they are—regardless of the evidence.

DEBUNKER I want things to be this way, so they are—regardless of the evidence.

PARANORMAL EVENTS Physics we don’t yet understand.

SUPERNATURAL EVENTS Physics we don’t yet understand. Remember Arthur C. Clarke’s famous statement, “Any science sufficiently advanced will appear as magic.”

CLINICAL INSANITY When a person does not change her or his views when presented with proof of the opposite.

EXAMPLE If you tell someone you have seen Bigfoot and she or he rolls her or his eyes and walks off, that person is not a scientist or a skeptic. That person is an orthodoxist and debunker.

EXAMPLE I once had two students who were convinced I was only 28 and had run off and left my husband with three little babies. I was nearly 50 at the time and if I had gotten married and popped out three babies, I think I would have noticed!

They stalked me for a while and I decided to go to the Dean of Students. When I left my office building, they were standing outside with a man. They literally threw him at me and shouted, “There she is!” The man took one look at me and shouted, “That’s not my wife!” and stomped off.

I stood there waiting for an apology. One of the women shook her fist in my face and screamed, “You may have fooled him, but you didn’t fool us!”

Those women were “believers” and quite clinically insane. (I use the word “believe” in the above context and not in any religious context.)

I’ve written books and given numerous lectures about my experiences and my research. The first question readers usually ask me is what was my most frightening experience. I’ve had many, but I’ll pick this one to make a point. The point being that having a “plan” can help you through these events more than you know! A plan will give you something to hang on to. It will make you feel less helpless. Children especially need a plan.

I’ve seen many times that a child is less frightened if she or he is instructed what to do in emergency situations.

I’ve also heard many psychologists specializing in abduction advise to never tell the child it was all a dream unless the child thinks it is a dream. I’m not fond of children, but I get mad when I see adults treating children as something less than intelligent. They know when they are awake or not!

One morning I woke up and felt the way the Wicked Witch felt under that house! When I tried to move, my midsection was stiff and painful. I pulled up my gown and got the fright of my life! There was a piece of adipose tissue hanging from my very red and swollen navel!

Adipose tissue is composed of fat cells and is supposed to be under one’s skin. The only way for it to get above the skin is through a surgical procedure. I tried not to panic. This wasn’t the first time I had awakened to frightening conditions!

I sterilized a pair of tweezers and got a sterile gauze pad. I put the tissue in the gauze. Then I gave myself a very

How do we tell the public?

For example, who would believe us if we reported that six-foot Praying Mantis beings are common from Australia to America to Europe? And who would believe the thousands of bizarre cattle mutilations might be related to alien intrusions? Or that reports of Bigfoot, or a nasty Reptilian race of Lizard Men is also connected to UFOs? Soon the public will expect Elvis to be coming back on the next saucer!

When the most basic and credible UFO data is still being tossed out by many uninformed and disbelieving humans, it is easier and “safer” to NOT believe. It is easier and safer to not disrupt our world by such impossible weirdness. Well, it isn’t going away. But—how do we share with the general public the truth about all the weirdness?

Hunt for the Skinwalker

One book pulls it together for me: Hunt for the Skinwalker by Colm Keller and George Knapp (2005) takes an honest look at all this weirdness. An assembled team of top scientists runs head-on into a multitude of bizarre experiences that are all around us, whether we like it or not. Their reports, from highly trained specialists using the best equipment, resources, and scientific thinking in our country, are exactly like what so many ordinary people have been trying to tell us for decades.

Having met this scientific team in 1995, I can tell you that two members were astronauts who walked on the Moon. That is a high level of credibility indeed! And they experienced and debated the existence and nature of all of the same “weirdness” with very little resolution and no definitive terrestrial explanation for any of it.

The researchers were manipulated

Hunt for the Skinwalker describes the efforts to document supernatural events on a remote ranch in a beautiful section of Utah and analyze these events properly through scientific procedures. By the end of the research it became clear to the scientific team that an omniscient presence and energy was in control of the strange events, and if anybody was being studied and manipulated, it was probably the team of researchers!

Despite clever efforts and scientific instrumentation, the phenomena presented itself at will and in a clever, calculated, and chilling fashion. This amazing form of a supernatural cat and mouse chase left researchers with the same frustration ordinary witnesses have been trying to convey to a disbelieving public for years. It is especially interesting to me that so many forms of “weirdness” were all in one place.

Skinwalker leads to a broader understanding of how seemingly unrelated phenomena could be sharing a similar method of entry into our world!

Before arriving at some fascinating deductions, let’s take a look at the various types of extraordinary encounters occurring on this Utah ranch and the surrounding terrain.

An Invisible presence divided cattle herds and stampeded them in two directions, roared with a thunderous noise, chased animals into a panic, ripped surveillance equipment apart while nothing appeared on videotape.

1. Floating, basketball-size, blue spheres—which seemed to contain a luminous, swirling liquid. The blue spheres flew purposefully and intelligently, and reacted to people and animals in the environment. Humans described a telepathic presence—sometimes creating intense fear or a sense of “being watched.” The spheres reacted to thoughts, movements, and spoken words.

They taunted or teased animals, created stampedes, and on one occasion, lured the ranch owner’s three favorite hunting dogs into the woods where they were later found incinerated in three circles of scorched ground. There was no doubt the blue spheres were under intelligent control, and they were ominous and terrifying to humans.

2. Unidentified flying objects—of all kinds: classic disc-shaped saucers; dark, triangular, slow-moving, silent craft; and a “floating RV” with searchlights.

3. Unusually large creatures—from a six-foot high grey wolf, to 800-pound Bigfoots, to massive, 400-pound, dog-like beasts. These creatures were impervious to bullets and shotgun shells and vanished into thin air while in plain sight. Despite the incredible disappearing acts, fresh tracks could be found right up to the vanishing points.

On one occasion, the rancher's family stroked the extraordinary wolf like a friendly stray dog. But, in a flash, it leaped to grab the head of a 300-lb calf with its powerful wolf jaws. Kicking and beating this six-foot tall "wolf" with a baseball bat phased it not at all.

Nor did three shots from a .357 magnum gun at close range bring any blood, injury, or reaction. A fourth shot

6. Cattle mutilations—livestock found with bloodless, surgical incisions, attacked and killed during snowstorms or in broad daylight, sometimes just minutes after the cattle were last observed. Organs were cleanly removed with surgical precision while nothing was seen entering or leaving the pastures.

7. Men in Black—Very tall, dark figures in black suits were seen, one in a black Cadillac, highly unusual in rural Utah.

Two scientists watched with night vision equipment as a "tunnel of pale yellow light" expanded to allow a 400-lb humanoid to pull itself up and into our world!

directly into the heart only caused the huge wolf to calmly back away, seemingly unconcerned.

Next, two thunderous shotgun blasts slammed into the wolf's body, causing a sizeable chunk of flesh to exit the wound. Yet the wolf calmly walked off, apparently unaffected. With the rancher and his son giving chase, the wolf loped off but vanished into thin air as they closed in on it.

4. Displacements—Objects (often very heavy) vanished and reappeared later in different locations. The most bizarre was the silent relocation of four 2,000-lb bulls from a closed corral into a locked trailer in less than an hour's time. The four bulls were unbelievably crammed into this trailer whose lock had not been opened in years. They appeared to be in a trance-like stupor until they "awoke"—at which point they panicked and destroyed the trailer.

On another occasion three boys spent hours moving 200 large metal poles from one location to another. Later that day, all 200 poles were suddenly back in their original location—much to the boys' shock and dismay! In another incident the rancher's 70-lb post-hole digger disappeared for days, finally reappearing 20 feet up in a tree

5. An Invisible presence—which divided cattle herds and stampeded them in two directions, roared with a thunderous noise, chased animals into a panic, ripped surveillance equipment apart while nothing appeared on videotape, and hovered so near to people they could smell an animal-like odor. Sometimes a big shadow was seen; at other times a translucent, half-visible blurry shape.

9. "Openings"—in the sky, air, and ground through which creatures, craft, and humanoid beings seemed to enter and depart in the blink of an eye. On one occasion scientists watched a Bigfoot creature run at top speed across the terrain as if being chased by some invisible predator. As it ran, the creature disappeared; it seemed to slip through an invisible doorway.

One evening, an orange glow in the sky become an "opening" through which observers saw blue sky. As they watched, a disc-shaped craft flew out of that "other sky" at high speed into the Utah night sky. This "open rift" in our sky appeared quite often. On yet another occasion two scientists watched with night vision equipment as a "tunnel of pale yellow light" expanded to allow a 400-lb humanoid to pull itself up and into our world!

9. Orbs of Light—other than the blue spheres which flew intelligently and seem purposeful. An example is small red golf-ball size orbs that harassed animals on the ranch.

Phenomena seemed to appear and disappear through "invisible doorways" or openings from one dimension into another.

10. Ground Traces—Scientists found scorched circles on the ground and deep impressions seemingly left by a heavy craft or equipment.

All this on one ranch

Perhaps you have read about or experienced some of the supernatural events listed above, but, amazingly, all these phenomena were encountered by the team of scientists at one location, the Gorman ranch in Utah. What gets my attention is that each type of phenomena seemed to appear and disappear through “invisible doorways” or openings from one dimension into another. Are diverse and seemingly unrelated phenomena simply using the same kind of dimensional openings to enter and exit our world?

Our world is the dimension we can visibly see with our human eyes, but it is not the total of all that could be seen around us. The proximity of other dimensions perhaps suggests that UFOs do not, in fact, travel great distances across the universe to get to earth. Not to sound Star-Trekky, but perhaps the UFOs take a wormhole, make a dimensional leap—and, they’re here! Everybody will take a short-cut if they can find one!

Even in Missouri

Not far from where I live in Missouri a strange light appears fairly regularly in the sky. Known as the

Are diverse and seemingly unrelated phenomena using the same kind of dimensional openings to enter and exit our world?

John Carpenter

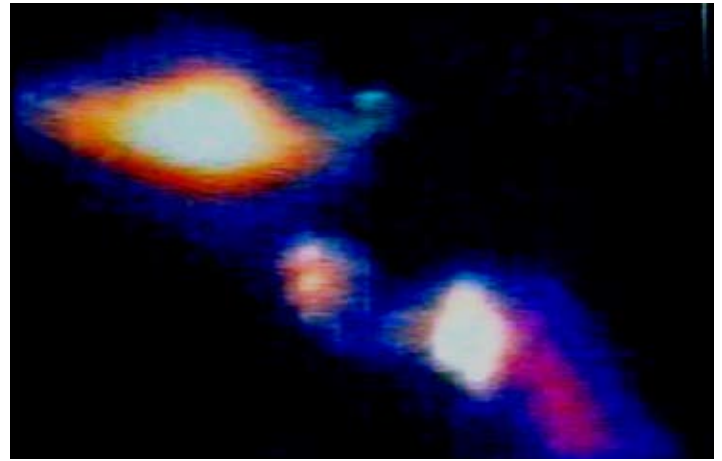

obtained a Bachelors of Arts degree in Psychology from DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana, and a master’s degree in Social Work from Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri. He has had advanced training in Clinical Hypnosis in order to practice as a psychiatric therapist and hypnotherapist in Branson, Missouri. For nearly 20 years he has counseled people in Southwest Missouri for every kind of emotional problem imaginable. His life-long curiosity in UFOs led to his volunteering his services for over 120 cases of possible UFO abduction.

Using clever interviewing and thorough hypnotic investigation, he has collected amazing patterns of data which clearly depict a consistent and coherent scenario of extraterrestrial contact. He presented six papers at the prestigious MIT Abduction Study Conference in Boston in 1992. His published papers have brought him international recognition and speaking invitations on five continents. He has presented at conferences from Australia to England, on national and international radio, television, and film documentaries. He has created and produced seven research videotapes since 1996.

“Joplin Spook Light,” or “the campfire in the sky,” it has been appearing since the 1800s and can best be seen from only one location. If one travels under it, to either side of it, or above it, by helicopter, the “campfire” cannot be seen.

Missourian Ted Phillips, noted UFO researcher and former assistant to Dr. J. Allen Hynek, says, “It is like you are looking into a doorway to another dimension.” Ted has researched the strange Missouri light and filmed it extensively for more than 40 years. The light usually appears in the same location in the sky, and balls of light and craft have been seen to fly down from it. Above is a photo of objects emerging from the light source in the sky over Missouri.

A doorway to the beyond?

Certainly, many strange things are being witnessed—and have been for centuries—and the phenomena are varied and often seem unrelated. The idea of dimensional openings ties many of these diverse events together; the phenomena seem to share common openings between dimensions. Now high-level scientists have found the same perplexing and astounding events first-hand, in the field, before their very eyes.

Hunt for the Skinwalker is a wonderful example of science finally taking an educated look at the weirdness. The irony is the scientists learned very little, and it seems they themselves were being watched, and experimented with, repeatedly, for the amusement of some omniscient, sometimes arrogant, intelligence. We may indeed be the ant farm after all.

When humans learn to crawl out of the dimensional holes that lead to our own ant farm, then we, too, might experience a larger world around us.

Believers would have been screaming "Aliens!" the minute they woke up.

I'm a scientist and skeptic. I went through the procedure before making the decision anything unusual had happened. I can now state with certainty that a surgical procedure was done on me without my knowledge or consent. Was it aliens? I have no evidence one way or another. I can't state and will probably never be able to state who did it.

After 40 years of research, I can state that "believers" are as damaging to the reputation of paranormal investigation as the "debunkers" are. They are two sides of the same coin.

If you are experiencing paranormal events and a reputable investigator questions you, having a list of facts and facts only, accompanied by relevant information, will lend credence to your story. Running around wringing your hands and screaming, "Aliens!" will not impress a legitimate investigator.

Science is vital to ufology

My approach to the problem is to try to use science to understand and combat alien intrusions. When dealing with aliens, it is easy to become confused by fantasy and fiction. For example, the word “shape shifter.” That is a Hollywood writer’s concocted term, used on Star Trek. It has no place in science, yet some investigators use it in an attempt to explain what is happening.

I have been working with abductees since 1998, and not one has reported seeing any kind of alien change its shape. So let’s separate ourselves from fiction and use science and valid scientific terms.

Just because the scientific community has turned its back to UFOs and alien abductions does not mean we should ignore science in UFO research. Jacques and Janine Vallee’s book, Challenge to Science: the UFO Enigma, addresses the failure of science to deal with the UFO phenomena. Science is a vital tool and there are many examples in history of people who have used science to successfully deal with the unknown and make sense of the world around them.

One of my favorite scientists is Antoine Lavoisier [1743-1794], known as ‘the father of chemistry.’ He studied real events in substances and elements. Lavoisier debunked the myth water could turn into earth. He gave us the theory of the conservation of matter—one of the foundations for our understanding of our universe. He also demonstrated that elements could not transmute into other elements.

Another example is my favorite doctor, Jean-Martin Charcot [1825-1893]. He was the first to distinguish mental disorders caused by emotion from those caused by physical impairment. His studies and demonstrations of hysteria laid the foundation for Freud’s work and for modern psychiatry and psychology. He also showed that Multiple Sclerosis is a neurological, and not a psychological, disease.

So let’s retain the vision and clear-headed attitude of the world’s great scientists in dealing with the greatest threat to the human race. My approach to alien activities is there is nothing magical or paranormal about what they do.

Alien technology obeys physical laws

The aliens have immense powers of the mind. That is where they are most advanced, baffle many investigators and abductees, and cause doubt in the minds of people with no knowledge of aliens. Prof. David Jacobs explains alien telepathic and other mental abilities in detail on his website, www.ufoabduction.com

It is likely the aliens travel great astronomical distances in short times, but they still must obey the physical laws of nature. Ohm’s law for us is Ohm’s law for the aliens. The law does not change, no matter who uses it.

My approach to alien activities is there is nothing magical or paranormal about what they do. Ohm’s law for us is Ohm’s law for the aliens.

“Thought screens up, men. We’re going in to attack!” is found throughout Doc Smith’s “Gray Lensman” science fiction novels.

The effectiveness of my invention, the Thought Screen Helmet, proves alien technology obeys physical laws. The Helmet uses Velostat, a carbonized plastic which blocks alien telepathic communication.

Science fiction can be good

I said above we should not use science fiction terms

to try to explain things about the aliens we do not understand. On the other hand, science fiction can prepare our minds to accept the reality of the aliens, and it can also stimulate us to think outside the box when it comes to inventing things.

That is what happened to me, starting with my childhood experience of science fiction. My father, Lawrence Menkin, created the first science fiction show for television in 1949, "Captain Video." It ran from 1949 to 1956.

At that time, both my father and I were interested in UFOs and read books on them. I still have my 1955 copy of Flying Saucers Uncensored by Harold T. Wilkins, and an autographed copy of George Adamski's 1955 book, Inside the Space Ships. My father got Mr. Adamski to autograph it for me. A number of reputable ufologists, including Timothy Good, author of Above Top Secret, believe Adamski's photos of UFOs are authentic.

When I decided to see what I could do about alien abductions, one of the most intriguing authors I found was Major Donald E. Keyhoe, who wrote about UFOs, also in the 1950s. His book, Aliens from Space, the Real Story of Unidentified Flying Objects, is a classic.

Aliens are telepathic

Jet fighter pilots were reporting that UFOs appeared to anticipate their maneuvers, indicating the UFOs perhaps understood our communications. Keyhoe thought so; he believed they had learned to translate our language.

However, it seems to me otherwise. Based on my work in technical writing—that is what I do for a living—working with translators, I did not think it was possible. After studying Keyhoe's work, I concluded the aliens are telepathic.

The best comment on telepathy I know is from Dr. Theodor Reik's book, Listening with the Third Ear:

. . .[A]cknowledgment of telepathy as a psychical phenomenon does not imply higher powers are substituted for the dynamics of [human] mental action. It is not necessary to assume supernatural happenings because some small fragments of what goes on in the world are unexplained. We need not give ourselves up to magic because the cause and effect of some process is unknown to us. We must confess [only] that our knowledge is not adequate to explain the phenomenon. Nor does it become more explicable if we refer it back to some greater unknown factor.

Which brings me to another author about telepathy, the science fiction writer, EE "Doc" Smith, who had a PhD in chemistry. All of Doc Smith's "Gray Lensman" novels were full of telepathy—telepathic encounters, mind control, telepathic people, the use of telepathy as a weapon. One of Smith's favorite lines of dialogue is, "Thought screens up, men. We're going in to attack!" It can be found throughout his science fiction series.

To combat telepathy and telepathic control by the villains, Smith had his hero, Kinnison, wear a "thought screen." This idea has a tremendous impact on me. From Smith's novels I developed a real thought screen. I developed a real thought screen from a combination of scientific observation and a fictional idea.

Thought Screen Helmet development

I had surmised the aliens use telepathy, and Budd Hopkins research confirmed it. Budd reported the aliens both transmit and receive telepathically.

Given my scientific orientation, I realized if information was going back and forth between minds, the process must have a basis in physical reality. Telepathy must be an electro-magnetic transmission, but I had no idea, and I still have no idea, exactly what kind of EM transmission it is. Nonetheless, I started looking for material that could be used to shield the brain from EM transmission and I proceeded by trial and error.

At that time, I was a technical writer working for Panasonic Avionics in Bothell, Washington, which is the main American repair center for all Panasonic's In-Flight Entertainment Equipment.

The facility is close to the Boeing 747 plant in Everett, Washington, where I now work in Network Avionics systems. I interfaced with engineers and technicians on a daily basis and asked many questions about all the kinds of conductive materials used in the manufacture and repair of Panasonic Entertainment equipment.

I wasn't sure what I was looking for, but I guessed some kind of anti-static material might work. At first I tried making hats lined with the metalized plastic used to make static electricity bags, but the aliens were able to penetrate them.

With the help of UFO investigators Marilyn Ruben,

Velostat is a material which scrambles any electrical transmission which passes through it. I believe the Thought Screen Helmet works because the Velostat scrambles the telepathic signals being transmitted by the aliens.

Roger Leir, Ken Cherry, Scott Vought, and David Jacobs, I found abductees willing to try my invention. I made hats with different materials and sent them to abductees to try. After several failures, I finally found a material which is effective in blocking alien telepathy. It is called Velostat and is made by 3M. In nine years the aliens have not been able to penetrate Thought Screen Helmets incorporating this material.

Velostat is the key

Velostat is a type of plastic normally used to prevent static electricity damage to electronic components during manufacture. The Velostat material I use comes in sheets .006 inch thick.

I will not attempt to give you a technical description but suffice it to say Velostat is a material which permanently changes the characteristics ("phase") of any electrical transmission which passes through it. When a transmission passes through the material the transmission is scrambled and cannot be unscrambled.

I believe the Thought Screen Helmet works because the Velostat scrambles the telepathic signals being transmitted by the aliens. That is my theory as to how the Helmet works. It is a theory which could be tested in a laboratory if I knew the exact nature of the signals being transmitted.

However, that information is not available, so it has been necessary for me to proceed in a purely practical lets-try-it-and-see-if-it-works manner. And it does work. Abductees who wear the Thought Screen Helmet most of the time are not taken by the aliens.

Another characteristic of Velostat is it can be stretched and formed when heated. I found this advantageous because the new Helmets I make now incorporate Velostat which has been heated and then molded to the head. This makes a tight-fitting Thought Screen Helmet.

Although I make Thought Screen Helmets from baseball caps, women's hats, cowboy hats and motorcycle helmets, the Helmet pictured in most of the photos in this article is made from a leather aviator's cap which fits closely to the head and fastens under the chin.

The all-important thing about this type of Helmet is the abductee can sleep in it. It will not come off during the night, and this leads to one of the great benefits to abductees of the Thought Screen Helmet: good night's sleep.

Twelve sheets of Velostat

It takes a long time to heat and stretch each sheet of Velostat and insert in into the aviator caps. Each Thought Screen Helmet uses 8-12 sheets of Velostat and takes four hours to make. The hats are called Helmets because a helmet is worn for protecting the head from injury, a hat is not. In this case, the Helmet protects the whole person.

The all-important thing about the aviator's cap Helmet is the abductee can sleep in it.

The first successful Thought Screen Helmets used eight sheets of Velostat, but some abductees reported headaches and nausea while wearing it. I surmised the aliens were increasing the power of their transmissions in an attempt to defeat the Helmet. Increasing the power did not defeat the Helmet; however, it did cause headaches and nausea in the abductee.

That was why in 2007 I started making Helmets with 12 sheets. Both 8- and 12-sheet Helmets scramble the telepathic transmissions, but 12-sheet Helmets also eliminate the physical discomfort resulting from the presumed alien increase in power transmission. So 12-sheet Helmets are more effective, but take almost six hours to make. I use leather hats because I can stretch the Velostat over my own head easily with the hat after the Velostat is heated.

Making your own hat

Since I have a full time job and limited time, I have put instructions for making a Thought Screen Helmet on my www.stopabductions.com website. The website instructions do not include procedures for heating and forming the Velostat, but instead show how to make a Helmet with the Velostat as it comes from the

I pay the cost of making and mailing the Helmets and provide them to abductees for free.

manufacturer.

The reason the heating instructions are omitted is that the heating and forming is a delicate operation and I do not want people to be burned.

Furthermore, a technician from the UK found that the electrical characteristics of the Velostat change when it melts, which it does at fairly low temperature. Melting may change the shielding capacity of the Velostat. I know how to do the heating operation correctly, but I am not confident others will do as well. Furthermore, you also need hair on your head if you are going to heat the Velostat and mold it into the Helmet over your head the way I make them.

I am not an investigator

I do not consider myself a UFO or alien abduction investigator. All the contact I have with abductees is over the phone in the course of providing them with a Helmet and later seeing how it is working. I do not interview abductees in person and do not publish accounts of abduction experiences. I have never worked directly on an abduction case with any investigator or hypnotherapist, although many alien abduction investigators have helped me. I have limited time to interview people, nor money to travel and interview abductees.

It is also dangerous, I believe, to combat the aliens with their far superior mind abilities, knowledge of our mind functions, and their advanced technology. I feel I am in danger for combating them, judging from what they do to some people who successfully resist them, which will be discussed later. Therefore I play it safe and keep my distance.

The abductees I make Helmets for do not know where I live or what I look like except for photographs of me on the internet. I am a voice on the phone to them.

I do interview each abductee to decide if they need a Thought Screen Helmet, using criteria established by David Jacobs and Roger Leir. I require the abductee to provide a phone number and I find the telephone is a good screening device. For the most part, only serious people give me their phone number. Still, fewer than 60 percent of the people I interview receive Helmets from me.

The list grows

Another important fact readers of this article should understand is I do not keep extensive and thorough follow up information on the abductees I send hats to. I have been making Thought Screen Helmets for ten years, and it is difficult to maintain contact with abductees over long periods of time, especially since many inevitably change their addresses. Some abductees remain in contact with me, some do not.

Furthermore, since I keep making more Helmets, the list of abductees grows, making it more difficult to remain in touch with everyone who has a Helmet. Since abductees are aware the aliens can read their minds, they are sometimes afraid to call me or to have me call them. Some remain in contact by email. So what I report is limited by my ability to remain in contact with those who have Thought Screen Helmets.

I also do not know how many people make Helmets from the instructions on my website. I receive fewer than five emails a year from people trying to make Helmets.

I do have enough reports to be encouraged that the Helmet works in many situations. That is why I continue to make Helmets and send them to abductees. I pay the cost of making and mailing the Helmets and provide them to abductees for free.

Because I do not ask for money, and abductees know I am making Helmets as a public service, I feel I earn people's trust. Also, since I tell abductees the Helmet is experimental and they get it for free, there is no financial claim or responsibility. I am not putting anything over on anybody. The abductees are volunteers who try the Helmet for free, and in turn, provide me with information on its effectiveness.

He reports the abductions stopped after he began wearing the Helmet. He reports he wears a Helmet 24 hours a day and has been doing so since 2000. The only time he does not wear a Helmet is when he is in the shower or making love to his wife.

The aliens began threatening the daughter and telling her something terrible would happen to her mother if she could not convince her mother to stop wearing the Helmet. Eventually the mother gave in and stopped wearing the Helmet; both of them were then taken.

Constant wearing is necessary

By "successful cases" I mean abductees who report to me the abductions have stopped after they began wearing the Thought Screen Helmet.

One such case is a man in Ohio who reported multiple abductions by creatures very different from those reported by investigators such as Dave Jacobs and Budd Hopkins. I originally talked to this man in spring of 2000. He described creatures about 7 feet tall, thin, with small eyes and elongated heads who spoke a distinct language. He called them "Meek-Moks" from the sounds they make with their language. He also said they had a distinct smell, and arms longer in proportion to their bodies than humans. He said he was abducted many times by them.

I sent him an aviator's cap Helmet and a baseball cap

Helmet and every few months I contact him to see how he is doing. Through the years I've sent him several Helmets. He reports the abductions stopped after he began wearing the Helmets. He reports he wears a Helmet 24 hours a day and has been doing so since 2000! The only time he does not wear a Helmet is when he is in the shower or making love to his wife.

Another successful case is a man in Florida who described a four foot tall alien, somewhat humanoid with very distinctive skin. The several times I interviewed this man he described the alien's skin in great detail. He said it was white, with small lumps and was sticky to the touch. He called the skin "gumpy."

After a long discussion I sent him a Helmet which he also wears on a regular basis. He says it works, but he does not state if he wears it 24 hours a day.

There appears to be more than one type of alien or alien culture abducting humans. Multiple interviews over the phone with sincere people indicate this. Most of the abductees I work with report contact with the common types of aliens reported by most investigators—the small and large gray aliens—as well as their creators and authority, the “Mantis” or praying mantis-like aliens, and another group who work with the grays, the reptilian or snake skin aliens.

Children wear Helmets

All these common types of aliens are pictured in the drawings on my second website, www.aliensandchildren.org. These drawing were made by a 5-year-old girl and her brother who now wear a Thought Screen Helmet almost all day long, except when they are in school. I created the site specifically to show the drawing made by these two children.

After wearing Helmets for a year, the children started to remember what happened to them. The mother sent me hundreds of drawings which I decided to put up on a second website. I expected others to send me children's drawings of abduction experiences, but this has not happened. I found the drawings frightening and at first had trouble posting them in 2003. The drawings are a window into alien abduction activities with children.

The drawings show short and tall grays, snake skin aliens, mantis creatures, and alien-hybrid children as well.

One interesting drawing shows a mantis creature standing on all four limbs on the ground. Another abductee who recently contacted me also says she has seen the mantis creatures on all four limbs on the ground.

Threats to abductees

In a case in Virginia, I sent two Helmets to a woman and her daughter. The woman told me the Helmet worked; she felt she was no longer abducted, but her daughter was reluctant to wear the Helmet. Subsequently the aliens began threatening the daughter and telling her something terrible would happen to her mother if she, the daughter, could not convince her mother to stop wearing the Helmet. Eventually the mother gave in and stopped wearing the Helmet; both of them were then taken.

Soon after the mother stopped wearing the Helmet she said she was visited several times by a reptilian and

She left them in the open boxes overnight and the following morning the Helmets were gone.

The aliens went all through her house looking everywhere and eventually found the Helmet, even though she said she hid it well. Subsequently, she put a new Helmet I made for her in a locked cabinet, and the aliens did not take it.

was extremely frightened by it. The aliens have the Star Trek technology which enables them to beam down and appear in a home. She said the snake skin alien scared her to death. They must be very frightening looking creatures.

She felt so threatened by the aliens she gave up trying the Helmet at all and put the two Helmets in their original shipping boxes to return them to me. She left them in the open boxes overnight and the following morning the Helmets were gone, so we assume the aliens took them.

Aliens take the Helmets

So far the aliens have taken ten Thought Screen Helmets from abductees in America and Australia. In one case they took a Helmet out of a box in a closet. In another, the aliens went all through an abductee's house when she was at work and not wearing the Helmet. She is a nurse who cannot wear a hat at work, and her mentally ill son, who lives at home with her, does not like her wearing Thought Screen Helmets. The aliens took all four Helmets I had made for her and eventually returned one of them.

Another case involves a female abductee who was teaching alien-hybrids to drive an automobile. These aliens again went all through her house looking everywhere and eventually found the Helmet, even though she said she hid it well. Subsequently, she put a new Helmet I made for her in a locked cabinet and the aliens did not take it.

I find the aliens will not take a Helmet which is locked in a cabinet or other kind of enclosure. So now I tell the new abductees I send Helmets to that they must have a container they can lock before I send them a Helmet. This tactic has worked since July of 2007.

The aliens do have limitations. So far they haven't broken open a locked cabinet when searching for a Helmet. There is a page called "Alien capabilities and in-capabilities" on my website, aliensandchildren.org, which lists some other alien limitations.

In other cases of missing Thought Screen Helmets, the abductees just report the Helmet missing. A woman in New Jersey I have worked with for years phoned me early in 2008 to say that both the new aviator's cap Helmet and baseball cap Helmet I made for her were missing, and that the paper on which she wrote my phone number in her address book was also missing. She had to contact me through email. I will make her new Helmets because she contacts me about her experiences on a regular basis.

For the rest of this article, when I refer to aliens I am referring to the grays and their leaders, the mantis creatures.

He returned to find a small triangular piece of Velostat had been cut from the inside of the aviator's cap.

I have only one report of the reptilian aliens. David Jacobs says the reptilians are working with the grays, which I had one abductee confirm.

The aliens took a piece

Some events suggest the aliens are interested in how the Thought Screen Helmet works. For example, a man in Canada who has been wearing a Helmet for five years reported when he left his aviator's cap Helmet on his bed and wore his baseball cap Helmet, he returned to find a small triangular piece of Velostat had been cut from the inside of the aviator's cap. I sent him pieces of Velostat to repair it. This happened several times and he repaired it several times.

On another occasion, the aliens removed a piece of the leather from the outside of the hat. Then they left the Helmet on his bed right in the middle of the bed, as if they wanted him to notice. They did not take the Helmet itself. I subsequently made him two more Helmets. One has ten sheets of Velostat and he wears it almost 24 hours a day. He reports he continues to see lights outside his house at night and he feels the aliens are still around.

Goggles may thwart the mind scan procedure.

One abductee told me he knew the aliens could read his mind and he said he did not care; he was willing to fight to try to stop them.

Abductees who will fight

The abductees who contact me want to do something to stop being abducted. They are the type of people who will put up a fight. One abductee told me he knew the aliens could read his mind and he said he did not care; he was willing to fight to try to stop them. So the kind of people who get a Helmet or request a Helmet will fight.

Abductee Joni Strother is like that. It is her children's drawings which are on my website, aliensandchildren.org. Every time she calls me she tells me she is going to fight them and not give up.

Here is a breakdown of the type of abductees who contact me and try Thought Screen Helmets, and the outcomes, as far as I can determine.

Losing contact with abductees

Category one is people who receive Helmets after several interviews and cannot be contacted afterwards. Of the abductees to whom I send Helmets, about ten percent I am unable to contact afterward, either by telephone or email. This is frustrating for me, because I do not know what happened to them or whether the Helmet was effective. I can only assume the aliens prevented them from wearing the Helmet and from contacting me.

Category two is people who receive a Helmet, wear it, and are harassed and threatened by the aliens until finally they no longer wear the Helmet. One such case was the mother and daughter in Virginia I discussed above.

Another example, in 2000 I sent four early Helmets constructed with metalized plastic to Dr. Roger Leir who had a family of abductees interested in stopping abductions. These early Helmets were not as effective as the Velostat ones, and the aliens were able to eventually penetrate the Helmets and influence the family of abductees to remove them. After Dr. Leir told me what had happened, I offered to send a new batch of Helmets made with Velostat, but he said the family was afraid of retribution by the aliens and did not want to try new Helmets.

A beating

A similar case involved a nurse, discussed above, who reported success with a Velostat Helmet. She worked with Prof. Jacobs extensively, so I was sure she is a real abductee. She lives with her son who is mentally ill. We think he may also be an abductee, but he refuses to discuss it. He gets very upset when she wears her Helmet, so she can wear it only when she is in her bedroom since she can't wear it at work.

During one period she wore it successfully for several months and then one night forgot to wear it. She said six adult human-alien hybrids appeared in her house, two of them beat her while four others looked on. She subsequently went to the emergency room for treatment from her beating and was very shook up. However, she was determined to fight them and continued to wear the Helmet when she could.

Dogs were killed

After that, the aliens communicated to her they would kill her dog if she continued to resist them by wearing the Helmet. She persisted and the aliens apparently did kill her dog. According to her veterinarian, the dog's spinal cord had been cut internally and he could not determine how that happened. She continued to fight the aliens with the Helmet and she got two more dogs, which the aliens also killed in sequence.

The aliens continued to threaten her and took her when she was not wearing the Helmet. She believes the aliens made her sick in retaliation. Her physical condition deteriorated and now she spends some time in a wheel chair and has stopped wearing the Helmet.

I have another case of an abductee, a man, who was beaten by alien-hybrids when he forgot to wear his Helmet. I could not contact him after the beating.

Since I am the only person I know of working in the abduction field who reports this type of alien aggression and intimidation against abductees fighting the aliens, I believe I am the only one who has successfully stopped alien abductions. I have other cases of aliens threatening and harassing abductees who wear the Thought Screen Helmet. That's one reason I am convinced it works. The aliens would not behave the way they do unless the Helmet was effective.

Thwarted by mind scan

Regarding the woman who lives with her mentally ill son and wears her Helmet only in her bedroom, she is one of my failures. The aliens told her they wanted her blood to be transfused to an alien-hybrid who was sick. The sick alien-hybrid was probably an off-spring of hers. She wore the Helmet successfully for several nights, then a mantis creature woke her from sleep and used what Prof. Jacobs calls “mind scan” very close to her face and gained control of her will while she had the Helmet on.

So the Helmet can be overcome with direct “mind scan” by mantis creatures, although if a person is physically strong, and not sick and weak as this woman is, the person may still be able to physically overcome the mantis creature and perhaps hit it and wound it. This is the only case I have where a mantis-creature or leader came down to directly remove a Helmet. Evidently the gray aliens don’t have the abilities of their leaders.

Some give up

Another group of people who receive Helmets from me wear it successfully for at least six months, and then cease communication. There are many abductees I have worked with who report success for some time, even years, then I can no longer contact them. I can only assume the aliens eventually got to them, threatened them or in some other way stopped them from wearing the Helmet.

The difficult thing about wearing the Helmet is that once you start wearing it, you must wear it as frequently as possible or the aliens will take you. A number of abductees have reported being taken during the day when they were not wearing the Helmet. Every hour an abductee is without the Helmet is an hour when he or she is vulnerable to abduction and/or alien harassment.

One abductee was very consistent wearing the Helmet. He even wore a baseball cap Helmet when he went shopping. I should mention the baseball cap Helmets or Helmets made from other types of hats are almost as effective as the Helmets made from aviator’s caps. The big advantage of the aviator cap is it can be worn overnight.

Took the hat off

On one occasion, this man went shopping at Wal Mart and did not wear the Helmet as he drove home. On arriving home, he discovered two hours of missing time. He even reviewed the Wal Mart security tapes showing him driving out of the parking lot, but saw nothing amiss on the tapes so the abduction must have taken place out of range of Wal Mart’s cameras.

Joni Strother’s children are not allowed to wear any headgear at school, and on several occasions school authorities called Joni to report her daughter missing for 45 minutes during lunch break. On another occasion, the child was missing from the time her mother dropped her off a block away from school. The school reported her an hour late, but Joni told me she left the child at school on time.

I have made Helmets for many abductees who wear it almost 24 hours a day, every day, for years. Almost constant wearing is necessary for success, and I have many abductees who do this, including men, women and children. I am in contact with many of these abductees on a regular basis and speak to some several time a week; others I contact several times a month by phone or email.

Sleeping all night

A good night’s sleep. That is one thing all abductees who wear the Helmet and rid themselves of abductions, report. They sleep normally, are able to rest, and are no longer afraid of being taken at night. They also report no indication of being taken during waking hours, no missing time, unusual marks on their bodies, unusual illnesses, unaccounted bruises, and no experiences of finding themselves in a place they can’t account for.

However, they also believe the aliens are still trying to abduct them. The man who continues to see lights outside at night reports also seeing what he thinks is an alien outside the house and in his doorway. Many still feel vulnerable, as this man does. He wrote this to me:

They are trying to penetrate the hat. There is no way I can tell if they have got through. There is that pain, [though it] is lesser pain with the grounds inserted. I think they can still read the mind and I have felt they are increasing power. . .I assume they. . .target selected areas of the head they want to peer into. It’s like they can still monitor brain activity or maybe are sending a signal when they detect body heat. I just don't know. It's as if they can see your every movement and I am sure there is something else which still brings them around to locate myself or other abductees. I think it's something to do with emotions or state of emotions they find interesting. I think their interest is emotion, the cause of emotion, [and our reactions] to emotions.

Because abductees who wear the Thought Screen Helmet are threatened and harassed by the aliens, that’s one reason I am convinced it works. The aliens would not behave the way they do unless the Helmet was effective.

Many abductees I have worked with report success for some time, even years, then I can no longer contact them.

Grounded Helmets

Note, the abductee quoted above says he feels better when the Helmet is grounded. As mentioned, I initially got reports of abductees who experienced headaches and/or a buzzing sound in their heads when wearing an 8-sheet Helmet. Then, in 2005 an abductee and her son, who was a technician, experimented in grounding the Helmets. They found if a standard 8-sheet Helmet had two grounding wires, using insulated wire with regular grounding rods, the buzzing sounds and the headaches disappeared.

The Helmet works better when grounded—more clear evidence the aliens are sending an electromagnetic signal in the form of a telepathic communication and the signal is being intercepted by the Helmet. It is indirect proof of alien communication and that the communication has physical properties. Not magic, not paranormal. The signal is similar to a cell phone transmission.

As a result of this finding, I put grounding instructions on my website, but I do not send Helmets with grounds because the abductee must still install a regular grounding rod, which is a four foot copper rod pounded into the ground. So the Thought Screen Helmet effectively intercepts and grounds the signal sent by aliens. Of course, the drawback to a ground is the abductee can wear the Helmet grounded only when sleeping, because movement is limited.

A struggle

In the case below, two adult alien-human hybrids removed a Helmet from an abductee before they took her. This suggests to me the hybrids cannot control her when she wears a Helmet even when they are in the same room with her.

In this case, Prof. Jacobs was working with the female abductee who wanted to try the Helmet. After trying the leather aviator's cap Helmet she said she was allergic to leather and could not wear it. I then made a Helmet using a cotton hard hat liner with a velcro strap at the throat. Because of the design of the liner, I could not put the same quantity of Velostat into the liner that I put into a leather hat, so it had less protection.

The liner may have worked initially, but because it was secured only by a small Velcro strap the woman wearing it let the hybrid pull it off. The woman sent the Helmet back. I replied I would make another Helmet using several straps that could be secured more strongly, but she did not want to try another hat.

A standard 8-sheet Helmet had two grounding wires, using insulated wire with regular grounding rods and the buzzing sounds and headaches disappeared.

A strange case

In a related case, a frail woman abductee who walked with a cane tried wearing an 8-sheet lined leather hat when confronted with two alien-human hybrids.

The woman was able to resist the alien-hybrids for several hours in a room at night, even when she felt they turned up their transmission and she had a headache and nausea. The alien-hybrids lured her into an adjacent room where one was hiding behind a door, and I do not understand what that was about. One hybrid then tackled her, she said, and the other forcibly removed the Helmet.

The following day the woman said the aliens went through her whole house, found the Helmet and took it.

She thought she hid it well but they found it. We decided that from then on she would keep the new Helmet in a locked cabinet when she is not wearing it.

Using motorcycle goggles

I made her another Helmet with 12 sheets of Velostat, which she feels works better—when she wears it. To prevent the alien-hybrids from using the “mind-scan” procedure, I also sent her motorcycle goggles with a tinted visor.

I also decided on motorcycle goggles instead of sunglasses because they have a strap around the head and are not easily removed. The goggles proved effective.

In her next encounter, she said at least two alien-hybrids again tried to lure her into an adjacent room by banging on the walls, but she did not budge. The aliens-hybrids did not come in through the open doorway and never faced her directly, so I think that the tinted goggles were effective.

This experience with the goggles is important to me because it suggests tinted goggles may stop the aliens from using the mind-scan procedure with their eyes. It may stop their hypnosis.

That same night, after about two hours of successful resistance elapsed, she said she thought the two alien-hybrids snuck up behind her (she was facing her computer) by going through the wall at her back and then grabbed her.

Since she had just had back surgery, she did not put up a physical fight and together the two alien-hybrids managed to remove the Helmet, which was also secured with a strip of electrical tape.

What they had her do after that was to teach them how to drive her SUV on the highway!! She is giving them driving lessons as part of their integration into our society. This time the hybrids did not take the Helmet from her house. I did not ask her to return it because the aliens could have put some kind of tracing device in it.

Although both instances are failures, I also state that both abductees put up little, if any, physical fight. I tell abductees that stopping aliens abductions is a fight, and in addition to wearing the Helmet as much as possible they must fight as much as they can.

It's possible if a person wearing a Thought Screen Helmet had a gun or rifle they could shoot an alien-hybrid who tries to remove a Helmet. Neither of these women had any weapon, and neither put up much of a fight, although the woman in the second account tried to use an aerosol spray because the aliens do not like perfume, but that did not work.

The woman was able to resist the alien-hybrids for several hours in a room at night, even when she felt they turned up their transmission and she had a headache and nausea. Eventually, one hybrid tackled her, she said, and the other forcedly removed the Helmet.

are not ghosts, they are not shape-shifting science fiction characters. The aliens are real, living creatures who are constrained by the physical laws of nature, as we all are.

Telepathy is an EM transmission

Much of the UFO community has not reacted positively to the Thought Screen Helmet. This surprised me and I believe the reason is I have shown that aliens and alien activity and technology are not supernatural. The aliens missions. However, I have not been able to get any engineers to help me conduct such tests.

Lab tests are needed

In 2002 I was working on my day job with radio frequency engineers at Metawave, a wireless telephone smart antenna company in Washington State. I told the Metawave engineers about the Thought Screen Helmet, but I could not get any of them to help me. My request for help is still open and is discussed on my website, www.stopabductions.com.

Significance of the helmet

What does the success of the Thought Screen Helmet mean? Several things. If we are willing to wear the Helmet all the time, we can stop the abductions. The aliens are not omnipotent, as some investigators claim. The aliens also have emotions, and they get very angry with people wearing a Thought Screen Helmet.

The Helmet also indirectly proves there is such a thing as telepathy and it is a physical force. After all, EEGs measure electrical activity of the brain. The Helmet just takes it several steps further in dealing with a microwave type of transmission to the brain.

The additional fact that the Helmet works better when grounded also indicates it does intercept a real, physical, microwave type of signal.

Anybody who can get Velostat can stop an alien abduction. That is why my website, www.stopabductions.com, provides directions for making a Velostat Helmet and lists sources for buying Velostat. One problem is it is hard to buy Velostat by the yard. Few suppliers sell it by the yard, so Velostat must be purchased by the $200 roll. You can't buy Velostat in a hardware store. It is sold only by companies which sell materials and parts to electronics manufacturers. See the materials section of my website for the list of suppliers.

There is a similar material, called Lingstat made by a Canadian company, Caplinq. The company was formed in 2004 so it's fairly new. Caplinq claims its Lingstat material is cheaper than Velostat, but with the decreasing value of the dollar, Lingstat is only about 8 percent cheaper at this March, 2008 writing.

More and more Helmets

Professor Jacobs once asked me for real statistics on the success of the Thought Screen Helmet. I have not complied because I can't maintain contact with every body who has received a Helmet, not only because not all Helmet recipients maintain contact but also because I have a full time job with a long commute. The problem is exacerbated because the more Helmets I make, the more people I have to maintain contact with, and it is impossible for me to do.

So all I can say is I have had enough success with the Thought Screen Helmet all over the world to state that it does work under the right circumstances with real aliens but not with alien-hybrids who physically remove it. I only have two cases of alien-hybrids physically removing a Helmet.

Labor intensive

I have a large backlog of abductees I have promised Helmets to, so I can't make any for other investigators. They or the abductees they are working with must go to www.stopabductions.com and see how to make one for themselves. Until there is a great demand for Helmets, I don't think anyone will make them for sale. The Helmets also take a long time to make.

Unless someone sets up a manufacturing plant, making a Helmet will always require at least three hours of labor. On the other hand, the materials are cheap. I can make a Helmet with $5.00 worth of Velostat, a $16.50 leather hat, and 50 cents of tape. I can make one from a $2.50 baseball cap, but it does not work quite as well as an aviator's cap Helmet and it can't be slept in.

More Helmets will be made

Despite my limited time and full time job, I intend to keep making Thought Screen Helmets and sending them to abductees for free to learn more about alien abductions and alien activities, and to obtain real proof of alien abductions if there is a situation where proof can be obtained.

There is a very interesting case of an alien who was apparently shot while stealing a pig from a barnyard in North Dakota. The case is documented in a recent MUFON Journal article. Two of the men involved in this incident now have 12-sheet Helmets and baseball caps. By the time this article is published, the third man will also have them. If the aliens try to steal another pig from these men's barnyard, maybe this time they can shoot an alien and get real proof. At least that is my goal.

I believe the aliens took the pig, kept it, and fed it for three months because they are trying to figure out how to feed us, once they invade and kill most of us. The humans who remain after the aliens carry out their plan will probably be maintained for genetic purposes, and those humans must still be fed. See my page on www.aliensandchildren.com.

So that's where the whole human race is with alien abductions and the Thought Screen Helmet. We face the greatest threat to the human race in history and as far as I know, we have one thing that can stop them—the Thought Screen Helmet.

Can the Helmet help autism and epilepsy?

The second thing I hope to do with the Helmet is make a contribution to medical science. By accident, I have found that autistic children who consistently wear the Helmet for at least three months begin to improve. I have made Helmets, which I call a Burnett Hat, for several autistic children who have improved dramatically. The mother is convinced the Helmet has saved the children.

Although the above-mentioned children are also abductees, I have one autistic child who is not an abductee. That child was mute and can now speak after wearing the hat for five months. That was in 2003. She still wears the hat intermittently and is continuing to improve, according to her father.

Another abductee was an epileptic. In just three weeks of wearing the Helmet, his EEGs returned to normal. After six months, his seizures stopped. His last three EEG tests were normal, and he now drives a car. Every time he calls me he is ecstatic about the Helmet. This is the abductee who still sees lights outside his house and who saw an alien in a doorway of his home, although he is pretty sure he has not been abducted.

Another hat-wearing epileptic is an elderly woman (not an abductee). She tried a Burnett Hat and her seizures decreased, but since she is in her 90's and has some dementia we can't make a definite conclusion about her.

In yet another medical case, a man who had a stroke said his mobility improved after wearing a Helmet every day for three months. Prior to wearing the Helmet, he could use only one hand and he walked with difficulty. After wearing the Helmet he could use both hands and arms plus his walking was better. However, he was too embarrassed to tell his neurologist that a Velostat-lined hat appeared to be helping him, and he would not pursue his improvement with the Helmet further. I've since lost contact with him.

I plan on working with the University of Washington's Autism Center and Epilepsy Center later this year if I can get the time to do it.

strong interest in examining abductees. Other investigators, including Eve Lorgen,⁴ suggest the US is secretly running elaborate psychological programs with abductees, in their extent much like the elaborate psychological programs the aliens are secretly running with abductees. Is there anything about Bill Holden's case that might give us insight into these questions?

The overt events which happened to Bill in 1966, 1971, 1975 and 1995, and Bill's response to these events, cry out for explanation. The explanation, however, has to be inferred, and that is tricky, and I would not want to overreach. So first, let's look at the facts of what happened to Bill Holden as he describes them.

A Top Hat clearance

Bill joined the Air Force in 1962 at the age of 18. He stayed in until 1977 and left with the rank of Tech Sergeant "E6 equivalent." To my knowledge, he was stationed in Europe, the US, Panama, and Vietnam. Bill is "the grandson of a Methodist minister," he likes to remind people, raised in Forsyth, Georgia. "I don't smoke. I don't drink. Never done drugs," Bill told Project Camelot.

He describes his job in the Air Force as "Loadmaster and flight steward, Special Air Missions." That means Bill was a member of an aircrew that flew people around the Air Force needed to have flown around.

One of the people Bill flew around was JFK, for the purpose of which Bill had what he calls a "Presidential Top Hat security clearance." Bill is best known in the UFO community for his account of a short conversation about UFOs he recalls having with President Kennedy in 1963.

That conversation, described in his Camelot interview, seems to have been a spontaneous event, unlike other unusual things that happened to Bill. After he was no longer assigned to fly JFK, Bill says he received a Top Secret clearance and kept that throughout his time in the service.

A special assignment

The summer of 1966 is the first time the US government went out of its way to show Bill aliens and alien aircraft. An experiment. We have to call it that because Bill Holden had no need to know.

In 1966 Bill was an ordinary airman with ordinary duties, and after the amazing events he returned to ordinary duties. By "ordinary," I mean Holden had no duties having anything to do with UFOs or the UFO coverup; nor was he recruited to work for the UFO coverup after the government showed him aliens.

Bill says in 1966 he was stationed at Peterson Field, Colorado⁶ and his job was air transport of "high ranking officials and international dignitaries." One day Bill was called in front of an Air Force lieutenant colonel who asked Bill to undertake a voluntary special mission.

According to Bill, he said, "Sir, I take every mission.

. . . You don't have to ask me would I like to go. You tell me, I'll go.' And so he [the lieutenant colonel] went ahead and had me sign a 20-year non-disclosure agreement with full penalties, all the way up to going to prison and losing all rights."

Bill was trusting

In Bill's response to the lieutenant colonel we can read something of his character at that time in his life. He was obedient. Of course, when you are in the military you have to be obedient. And Bill was. He was also, I judge, based on the interviews, trusting, loyal, cooperative, and passive. "I'm in the military. I do what I'm told. I stay at my post," Bill told me in my interview with him.

That did not surprise me. But it did surprise me that Bill did not ask his superior officers why they put aliens in front of him; and what really surprised me was when Bill said he had not even asked himself.

The aircraft left Peterson Field without passengers and flew to Andrews AF Base in Maryland. There, Bill says, they picked up "one Brigadier General, a couple of colonels and [an] entourage [of] high ranking civilian engineers and scientists." Next stop was Wright-Patterson air base in Ohio.

Bill told Project Camelot that at Wright-Pat the high ranking entourage "went to the blue hanger [where] reverse engineering was being done on UFOs.” How did you know what went on at the blue hanger? asked Kerry Cassidy, the interviewer. Bill said he learned about the blue hanger “later.”

Bill also told Camelot the passengers visited the Air Force Academy and NORAD headquarters in Cheyenne Mountain when the plane flew back to Peterson Field. This is all speculation on Bill’s part since he also states the aircrew remained on base and with the aircraft during these two stops.

Passengers back on board, the next stop was White Sands, NM, and here a different scenario unfolds which Bill personally witnessed.

White Sands surprise

At White Sands a bus appeared and the high ranking entourage as well as the 6-man aircrew was put on the bus. The bus had blacked out windows. “To this day,” Bill told Project Camelot, “I do not understand why we [the air crew] went along.”

Indeed.

The people on the bus were then checked, Bill says. Some men “not in an Air Force uniform but in a khaki-colored—with a special emblem (and I can’t remember the emblem) on the left sleeve” showed up. “They were armed and had a clipboard and each of us had to show our military ID. And then we were checked off the list and told to go ahead and sit down.”

From where he was seated Bill says he could see out the front window of the bus. Leaving White Sands, the bus traveled “for about 45 minutes to an hour,” Bill says, and arrived at a place where Bill “could see like walls of a mountain on the left by the driver.”

The bus “was stopped,” Bill says, a “guard rail” came down and “this guy got on board with another gentleman and walked through with a clipboard. Again all of us had to show our ID.

“From that point we were driven on in and we stopped at . . . a shack out there. We got off the bus and the entourage was escorted” away. Surveying the scene, Bill saw “two Quonset huts, another building, and a runway. We were inside a box canyon,” Bill told Project Camelot. Then he saw it—“a UFO on the ground” about 100 yards away.

ETs in silver flight suits

The crew of six was “held back” with the bus, Bill remembers. As he looked over to where the UFO was, Bill says he saw two ETs “in one-piece aluminum-colored flight suits.” The ETs were about 5 feet tall and “moved very gracefully. Their skin was a pale color and as what is typified or called a Grayling is what they looked like. The larger head, the large black eyes, small mouth, small nose, but very thin lips. Their arms, very thin and the hands were long and thin.” Bill says he doesn’t remember how many fingers were on the ET’s hands.

*You said the ETs had thin lips. You could see that from 100 yards?*⁷ [Author’s questions in italics.]

With a pair of binoculars I sure could!

So you were looking through binoculars?

Absolutely was.

And no one restrained you from using binoculars?

I saw the driver had a pair of binoculars and I said, May I use those? Were you being observed by anyone?

Probably, but I didn’t see anyone observing me other than the driver.

The driver was observing you? What was his behavior?

Just like a group of guys together and comments being made and that’s about it.

But you say he was “observing” you?

I, what I told you was, if there was anyone observing me it would be the driver because there was no one else around me or outside that was around us.

So you were alone out there—

We’re alone out there.

—the bus, the driver and the six aircrew members.

We were able to just watch.

The watching went on for about an hour, Bill says. The door to the UFO was open and Bill says the VIPs went into the craft and came out of the craft, and that each time a VIP went in one of the ETs went along. Eventually the VIPs returned, everyone got back on, and the bus left the location.

No discussion

“We were not allowed to ever discuss the mission with any of the participants,” Bill told Project Camelot. “When the crew was around there was no conversation about what was going on.”

By contrast, when I asked Bill if, after watching the astounding sight, the flight crew members spoke to each

Bill did not ask he superior officers why they put aliens in front of him, and he did not even ask himself.

other, he responded, “Of course!” What did you guys say to each other? “‘Just, my gosh! Look at this!’ You know, it was astounding, it was historical.”

I don’t expect Bill Holden to have total recall of events that happened decades ago. I don’t expect him to tell his story in the same words each time, or with the same emphases. Nor does he have, habitually, a very precise manner of speaking, and he often interjects speculation into his testimony, (and listeners need to make themselves aware of the difference, because Bill doesn’t).

When he tells Camelot “we were not allowed to discuss. . .” and when he tells me “Of course! [we spoke to each other],” I bring it up because readers may watch the Camelot interview and think they see a discrepancy. I understand Bill to mean that ejaculations such as “My gosh!” were exchanged between crew members, but as for substantive discussion, there wasn’t any.

Did you talk to each other?

Not anything more than, what we had, other than, ‘Oh my gosh, this is great!’ What can you say? All you can say is you’re astounded as far as what you’re seeing and as far as the historical. As far as I’m concerned, what happened was the crewmembers selected on this, as far as the two aircraft and the two missions, were a part of this team. I was the only one. I had never flown with these guys before. I didn’t know them. Other than a first name. And they didn’t give me a rank or anything else as far as I was in my civilian clothes and doing my duty. These individuals I went on a first name basis, no rank. I didn’t even know their real name. I saw no manifest. I never saw the names of anyone that got on or got off.

I’m not speaking about the VIPs, I’m speaking about the other military personnel.

You’re talking about the crew members.

That’s right.

You never got into, just like when I was doing my CIA missions in Vietnam, same thing. You went on a first name basis. No one knew your rank. You never asked questions about who that person was. You did your job.

Bill says the five air crew members were not from Peterson Field, where Bill was stationed and, he says, he never saw them again. When he says (above) they “were part of this team,” he is referring to his belief that the other five often flew together and he was “the only one” who was a newcomer. Bill also mentions CIA missions in Vietnam; I did not question Bill about this.

Bill told Camelot he was “excited, not shocked” at what he saw, and this reveals another feature of his character. Bill Holden responds to every UFO experience with joy and gratitude, and he does not ask any questions about it, whether the experience is arranged by the US government or brought to him by the aliens. “I consider it a blessing,” Bill says, “that I have had these opportunities. . .”

Another special mission

Some six months later, in the Fall of 1966, the government put together another UFO experience for Bill Holden. Again, Bill says he was “brought back in and briefed by the same lieutenant colonel. And he said same drill, same scenario, sign the non-disclosure form. I did.”

Leaving Colorado, the aircraft flew to Andrews AF Base, “and this time,” Bill says, “I’m expecting to see the same people again.” Instead, there was a “totally, totally different crew.”

As for passengers, “There’s an Admiral. There’s a Captain, which is the equivalent of full colonel in the Air Force. This was basically an all-Navy group with, again, high ranking civilian engineers and scientists but none of the same crew. Totally different.”

The aircraft flew to Wright-Patterson. “Here again,” Bill says, “they went to the blue hanger [speculation]. We flew [back] to Colorado Springs [Peterson Field] and they, again, went up into Cheyenne Mountain [speculation]. From there we went to Los Angeles and took off the next morning and we flew to Hawaii, landed at Hickam AF Base [Honolulu, at Pearl Harbor] and we were told, ‘Have the airplane ready, we’re leaving at midnight.’

“So we got everything ready, got some rest, back at the airplane, took off at midnight. We flew for somewhere around 3 hours and 45 minutes, to maybe 4 hours.”

Circling Hawaii

Bill says, “We were flying in a C-118, or what is the equivalent of a DC-6—a four-engine, propeller aircraft. And we landed. And I said [to the air crew], ‘Guys, we’re back in Hawaii.’ And they said, ‘What do you mean?’ and I said, ‘There is nowhere out there that we can go fly for 3 hours, 45 minutes to 4 hours and land. OK? Physically impossible in this airplane.’ I said, ‘Johnson Island is five and a half hours. Guam is much more. So, no, we’re back

\(Click here to continue on page 28\)

“You never asked questions.
You did your job.”
—Bill Holden

in Hawaii somewhere.’

Like the blacking out of the bus windows in New Mexico, the C-118 flying in a circle back to Hawaii is evidently an effort by the government to deny knowledge of the location of sensitive facilities to the parties involved in these excursions. Bill’s act of reasoning out that the aircraft had returned to Hawaii is one of the few examples, from his interviews, of Bill exercising independent judgment in connection with the events considered here. It is one of the few times he asked a question.

The aircraft lands back in Hawaii. “So, sure enough,” Bill continued, “again (which I still do not understand) we were all taken together. We had breakfast and then we went out to the site that’s right by the ocean on the west side (because the sun was coming up behind us) and we’re looking to the west. And it’s an observation deck and all of us are standing there.”

Cavorting craft

It is seven in the morning. The aircrew and the VIPs are assembled and, Bill told Camelot, “This craft comes out of the water, from our left to our right, just goes shewwww [makes sound of fast movement], then stops in front of us.” It was a “double elliptical saucer-shaped craft, but at the mid-beam on this there’s a light going back and forth, like this [indicates left/right, back and forth movement] at the mid-beam on it.

“Now, it sits out there and then almost instantaneously disappears. So everybody’s excited about what they’re seeing and everything. And about this time somebody yells, ‘It’s back!’

“And it’s now a little bit closer, about a hundred yards out, maybe 100, 200 feet off the water, and it then demonstrates, as far as going up and down, side to side, cants left and right, and cants at an angle and goes right back into the water. Now, when he goes into the water, and when he came out of the water, there was no explosion or implosion [of the water] as it went back in.”

Asked the size of the vehicle, Bill responded it was “a hundred yards out [away from him, so] I’m gonna guess this craft was. . . probably 50 to 60 feet overall length.”

Next day the aircraft flew the VIPs back to the States, and that was it. Bill went back to his ordinary duties. He asked no one in the military any questions and no one gave him any information as to why a 22-year old sergeant whose job was to fly VIPs around for the Air Force had been given the information that extraterrestrials are present on earth and people in the United States government fraternize with them.

The California drones

In 2007 several people in California posted on the net photographs of an aerial object that doesn’t look like any UFO ever reported and doesn’t look like anything else anyone says they had seen before. Because the object doesn’t appear to have passenger-carrying capacity, it is assumed to be remotely controlled and the photographed objects have come to be called “the California drones.”

In the wake of these photo releases, someone calling themselves “Isaac” contacted Coast to Coast radio and claimed the objects were alien-derived back engineered technology being deployed by the US.

Isaac said he is a retired electronics engineer and between 1984 and 1987 he said he worked for a DOD project called the Palo Alto Caret Laboratory. Isaac said Caret worked on the very technology depicted in the photographs and that he recognized the writing or symbols showing on the outside of the photographed objects.

People in the UFO community are still working on this case. Some think it is a hoax and some think it is not. Isaac has written an essay and provided nine pages from a greater quantity of documents he says he smuggled out of Caret in the 1980s, and all of that can be seen at www.isaac-caret.com.

The emotional side

One thing Isaac brings up in his essay is how he felt on learning that extraterrestrials are present on earth and the US government is involved with them. He calls it “the emotional side of the experience.” He says he had worked for DOD before Caret and during that earlier time, he writes, “I’d never heard so much as a peep about [UFOs].” In other words, before Caret, Isaac was one of those people who didn’t have a clue.

Accordingly, when he found out, he was extremely shocked. This is Isaac’s description of how he felt:

. . .there’s almost no way to describe the impact this kind of revelation has on your mind. There are very few moments in life in which your entire world view is turned forever upside down, but this was one of them. I still remember that turning point during the briefing when I realized what he'd just told us, and that I hadn't heard him wrong, and that it wasn't some kind of joke.

In retrospect the whole thing feels like it was in slow motion, from that slight pause he took just before the term "extra-terrestrial" came out for the first time, to the way the room itself seemed to go off kilter as we collectively tried to grasp what was being said.

My reflex kept jumping back and forth between trying to look at the speaker, to understand him better, and looking at everyone else around me, to make sure I wasn't the only one hearing this. At the risk of sounding melodramatic, it's a lot like a child learning his parents are divorcing. I never experienced that myself, but a close friend of mine did when we were boys, and he confided in me about what [it] felt like. A lot of what he said would aptly describe what I was feeling in that room.

Here was a trusted authority figure telling you something you just don't feel ready for, and putting a burden on your mind you don't necessarily want to carry. The moment that first word comes out, all you can think about is what it was like only seconds ago, and knowing that life is never going to be as simple as it was then. Maybe one day I'll write more on this aspect, because it's the kind of thing I really would like to get off my chest.

Bill vs. Isaac

One difference between Isaac and Bill Holden is Bill Holden, in 1966, did know UFOs are real. He'd seen a UFO as a child in Georgia; he saw a UFO from an aircraft in 1962; and he'd told President Kennedy that same year that he, Bill, didn't see why humans would be the only ones in the universe. The President, according to Bill, said something like 'You've got that right, Airman Holden.'

On the other hand, before 1966, Bill Holden did not know about the UFO cover up. He did not know the US government is deeply involved with ETs, so there was still plenty for Bill to have been shocked about. But, according to Bill, he wasn't shocked at all. He was "excited, not shocked," Bill says.

A normal reaction

The reason I brought Isaac into this is to illustrate what I take to be a normal psychological reaction of an adult American on learning the revolutionary UFO truth, and also to show that there can be consequences when this reaction is left unattended. In Isaac's case, the consequence was Isaac smuggled a lot of classified documents out of Caret.

Note that his security clearance, whatever "non-disclosure" papers he may have signed, and the fact that what he did was illegal, did not deter Isaac.

The government ignored Isaac's psychological status. They wanted his intellect. They treated him like he was a computer or a robot. They gave him information that turned his world upside down and left him alone to cope with it.

The result was Isaac took the documents out because he knew some day he would reveal the information. At least, that's what Isaac says.

And Isaac reacted this way even though he had a cushion. He had three subsequent years of daily interaction in Project Caret with people among whom the shocking truth was acknowledged, and that definitely is a cushion. Plus, Isaac had a reason the truth was revealed to him: engineering research on alien technology. Isaac didn't have to ask, Why me?

By contrast, Bill Holden is shown more than Isaac was. Bill is shown aliens close enough to see they had thin lips, followed by—nothing. Nothing and no reason. Plus he is told to keep his mouth entirely shut about it. To me, that is a prescription for driving some men crazy.

Kevin's handlers

As for security, and "cushioning," let's look at Kevin Marks—recall, he was given a lie detector test by a hybrid at the CIA. Kevin was abducted that very night, by whom we do not know.⁸ Let's say it was the CIA. I mean, after all, wouldn't you if you were the CIA?

The CIA we're assuming here is running a psychological experiment on Kevin to see what is the impact on an abductee—a person whose subconscious does know the reality of ET, a person who has been in the presence of aliens many times but whose conscious mind does not know that—what happens when you put aliens in front of that person in their normal mental state?

I figure the CIA picked Kevin up that night in order to ask him a bunch of questions about what he thought he had seen that day, and how he felt about it, and find out how it was playing out for Kevin against the background of his abduction experiences.

The CIA would have thoroughly explored the impact of the experiment on Kevin. Maybe the hybrid woman who gave Kevin the lie detector test was in the room when they questioned him. Maybe other aliens were there, along with humans.

After they asked Kevin a lot of questions, then they did something else as a security precaution. They installed in Kevin an “aversion” to what had occurred at the CIA.

Beginning the following day, Kevin began to feel revolted by what he had experienced and he also began to refuse to talk about and refuse even to think about it. I assume the aversion was installed to safeguard the security of the government’s information Kevin now had. Inadvertently, this was a benefit to Kevin and helped him cope.

I acknowledge this is all inference on my part, but, hey, that’s why they pay me the big bucks here at JAR!

Ignoring psychological status

For security reasons, the people who run the UFO coverup cannot afford to ignore the psychological status of anyone who is privy to the most important secret in the history of the United States. To ignore it generates bad outcomes for the government, such as Isaac.

To take Bill Holden’s story at face value is to assume the government gave explosive secret information to a religious 22-year old sergeant and then left him completely alone with it and the only safeguard against breach of security was a piece of paper.

Do we really think that’s what they did? Cut him adrift in the manner that Bill’s conscious recollection suggests? Or do we think much more was going on behind the scenes?

Not that the security procedures followed or not followed are the main point here. The main point is why did the government show aliens to Bill Holden in the first place? Then, why was Bill never shocked by any of it and never curious or assertive enough to ask questions about it or even to wonder, possibly with some alarm, why me?

Our observations about security are only one more item in the picture that doesn’t add up; and the only way I know of to make it add up is to assume Bill Holden was part of an on-going government psychological experiment he knew nothing, consciously, about.

An abduction in Florida

Very good. Now let’s look at the next UFO-related event that happened to Bill Holden in the Air Force. The event is shocking, although Bill, once again, was not shocked by any of it.

The year is 1971 and Bill is stationed at Patrick Air Force Base, Cocoa Beach, Florida.⁹ It was a Friday afternoon, and Bill decided to go fishing.

“And I’m—I always love to go down to the Indian River, and go fishing, and everything. So. . .I was going down, and putting my gear out and everything. And threw my line out and just kind of stepped back. And I’d like to preface this [by saying]”—and this is where Bill told Project Camelot, “I don’t smoke. I don’t drink. Never done drugs. And I’m the grandson of a Methodist preacher!

“So I wasn’t having my beer, but I kind of leaned back against the palm [tree] and the next thing I know, I'm on a pedestal table. I'm inside a craft. I'm looking up at a domed ceiling. I don't see any light fixtures. And I have three ETs to my left-hand side, two short, one taller. And I'm guessing about five feet tall and maybe three and a half to four feet tall. To my left.

"And the only marking in the room is up on the ceiling is this brilliant, brilliant, bright blue placard with three gold stars on it. OK? Now, conversation, as far as that I'm going through is all telepathic and basically (this has happened to me twice now): Tell them to stop destroying Mother Earth. Tell them to learn to love one another."

Were you afraid? Asks Kerry Cassidy of Camelot. "Surprisingly not. Surprisingly not," said Bill.

It is surprising, though, that when Bill Holden was returned from this experience he called the commanding officer at Patrick AF Base and told him he had been abducted by aliens.

Telling the CO

When Bill Holden told me this, in one of our interviews, I was dumbfounded. Abductees in civilian life do not report abduction experiences to the authorities, and the idea a military man would do so is beyond my comprehension.

You had no qualms about reporting the abduction to your CO?

None whatsoever.

Haven't you heard those stories about military guys who say they saw something and their commanding officer will say, 'You didn't see anything and if you keep on saying you did we have a place to put nut cases like you'?

Sure. That's about cover up. That's what I ran into in Germany with the Canadian flyer.

He is referring to an incident in 1962 when Bill and a Canadian air force officer were joy riding in a jet and they saw a UFO. The Canadian begged Holden not to speak about it.

Right. You have experienced when they don't want you to talk. So why didn't you decide it would be the better part of valor not to report the abduction to your CO, because presumably no one on base would have any reason to know about it.

Absolutely not! No, I did the right thing.

It occurred to me here that some of the officers at Patrick AF base in Florida were perhaps the same people who had sent Bill on the missions in 1966, and if they were, that would make Bill reporting the abduction more understandable. But no, Bill said they were none of the same people, not the officers and not the men.

[Incredulous] You weren't thinking, Maybe I better keep this information to myself?

No m'am.

Well for God's sake, what did your commanding officer say when you told him you'd been abducted by aliens?

He said, very succinctly, as far as that if I didn't know you any better Sgt. Holden I'd say you'd been smoking or drinking.

A debriefing

And the next morning Bill Holden was debriefed by three friendly plainclothes investigators. They questioned him for about two hours and at the end of the interrogation, according to Bill, the head investigator told Bill this: "Just to put your mind at rest, Sgt. Holden, you were not the only one. There were 17 others on the base, military and civilian, who had the same experience yesterday with one or more of the ETs."

"Just to put your mind at rest, Sgt. Holden," said the military interrogator, "you were not the only one abducted from this air base yesterday."

On hearing this, I was barely able to speak. All I could manage was to stammer out, Wa-wa-why do you think they told you that? Bill responded he thought they told him that because of "how I felt about it. Excited. I didn't have a fear and I was very excited about the experience."

Did they tell you how they knew 17 other men were abducted? We know how they found out you were abducted—You were kind enough to call and tell them. But did they say how they knew the others had been abducted?

No, they didn't, but the military side would probably [have been] the same way I did, which is we were supposed to let our commanders know about the experience, and the rest of them would have called in to the police or sheriff.

The civilians?

Right.

Why do you think that? Lots of people who have unusual experiences don't tell anybody. They are concerned about being thought crazy.

I think that's an assumption [on your part]. I don't think human nature is such that, one, if they feel they were abducted the very first thing they would do is go to the police. That'd be a normal move.

Even if they thought they were abducted by non-humans?

Even so.

What do you base that on, Bill, that it would be "normal"?

That's just my personal opinion!

So, in other words, it has now been disclosed to Airman Bill Holden, a sergeant whose job in the US Air Force is to see to the provisioning with food, water and other essentials the cabins of aircraft used to fly dignitaries from place to place and to dispense these provisions on board when the aircraft is aloft, that: extraterrestrials are real, they are on earth, US government personnel fraternize with the extraterrestrials, the extraterrestrials abduct human beings, including members of the armed forces, and the US Air Force is aware of these abductions and is not upset about it.

Indeed, in the words of one of the interrogators of military side, these things are happening to Bill. And we need to pause for a moment and look at that.

According to Bill Holden, the one and only time he was abducted was in 1971 at Patrick AF base in Florida. Many abduction investigators would tell you there is no such thing as one abduction in adult life, and that the unvarying pattern found by investigators is a lifelong series of events. Bill Holden saw UFOs as a child. He has an implant, evidently, and he showed its outline on camera during his Camelot interview:

"I found an implant in my left arm [shows inside of left elbow] about right here," Bill said. "It's about not quite an inch long and about 3/8 of an inch wide. You see where I'm pushing it up?"

As Bill squeezed the soft tissue of his arm, the outline of an object beneath the skin could be seen. Bill said he never had the object removed because "I consider it a blessing. . . [the implant shows] they felt it important enough that this device is following me, OK? So maybe. . . I may have another encounter."

Bill Holden, knowing this would "put [his] mind at rest." Specifically, knowing that "yesterday" 17 others had been abducted by extraterrestrials from Patrick Air Force base would put Bill Holden's mind "at rest." Apparently the interrogators' minds were at rest; they were friendly, relaxed.

"Reassuring" Bill

I have to say, some people would not be reassured by what Bill Holden was told. The supposedly comforting implication is, 'You're not the only one.' That's reassuring? If you broke your leg and were told 17 others also broke their legs, would you be reassured?

Some people, not Bill Holden, but some people would be dismayed to learn extraterrestrials can tear through a United States Air Force installation and pick people up right and left. And some people would expect the Air Force to be extremely upset by such an occurrence.

Some people, but not Bill Holden, because Bill Holden is an abductee. And that is the starting point of all this, isn't it? It is because he is an abductee that, on the Why doesn't he think of it?

Bill thinks he "may have another encounter," but he does not think of himself as an abductee. Despite Bill's now many years in the UFO community, reading, conversing, giving lectures, the idea-that-is-everywhere—that those who are abducted have a lifelong history often buried and outside their awareness—has not occurred to Bill Holden. From our interview:

Bill, it seems to me you're an abductee and—Willingly.

Yes, and I wondered when you became aware of that?
Immediately.

Immediately?

As soon as it was over. I knew what had happened.

Is it your understanding that is the only time you have been abducted in your life?

Uh, to the best of my knowledge, yes.

I see! When it happened, in 1971, in Florida, you reported

it to your commanding officer?

Yes I did.

Well tell me about that, for God's sake!

I just did.

My meaning, in asking "when he became aware" was when he became aware of a lifelong history of abduction. But Bill has no such awareness. As for "Tell me about that, for God's sake!" I am full of astonishment and Bill is matter-of-fact—"I just did" tell you about that. I told you I called my commanding officer and informed him I'd been abducted by aliens. Just as flat and bland as you please.

Because of his clearance?

Why did the Air Force pick you and the other flight crew to show you aliens? That was my question when I first telephoned Bill. From our interview:

Wait a minute! The reason was, is, because of my clearance, ok? It was because I had had a Presidential Top Hat security clearance. . .

Bill, you know a lot more about this than I do, but that doesn't explain why they picked you to see it. And brought you to this place in the blacked out bus—

The one was the—Right. So the only reason it could have been was to observe you and your responses to what you were shown, and the reason, I assume, that you were picked— Why would they want to know your reaction as opposed to any other person's reactions?—because you already had a history with this phenomena, that is, a history of being abducted.

They didn't know that. They didn't know that.

Well, it's not clear to me they didn't know it.

It's absolutely clear.

I think it goes deeper than what you're suggesting at this moment.

Why are you reading something into it that it's not? Cause I never, I never, in other words, no one as far as the military, my commanders, or the organization I met with, that selected me to be on this crew at the time of the two incidents in 1966—

Yes?

OK?

Yes?

That the only reason is that no one else in my organization in my duty capacity had a Top Hat or that high a clearance. I was the only one. That's the only reason I was selected. The six crew members from the aircraft were taken and shown the aliens. And they were just, I'll say "just" crew members. They "just" flew the plane, and yet they were shown this—

Right, but these crew members were not "our" crew. They were not from my base. I had never met them before. I was the only one picked from the base as far as to go on this mission.

So the question comes, then, how were these six people— How and why? Why? Why were they picked?

You're asking the wrong guy. I had no part in the crew selection.

My hypothesis would be—

I don't get into hypothesis! I only go on fact. I only go on what physically happened.

Right.

See, that's what's wrong with the UFO and ET researchers out there. Too many people get into hypothesis as far as they "guess" what happened. I don't guess. I only go on facts. Here's what happened, here's when it happened, here's where it happened.

When Bill says, above, "They didn't know that," it sounds like he is conceding an abduction history. He isn't. He is referring to the 1962 incident when he was flying with a Canadian AF man and they saw a UFO. Bill never shared that information with his superiors in the US Air Force.

Sometimes Bill questions

In Bill's Camelot interview, he does consider the idea the government was testing his reactions in 1966, and in 1973 when they sent him on a trip to Peru to view what Bill believes is the remains of ancient alien visitations.

Do you feel you were test subjects? Kerry Cassidy asked Bill. He replied, "You know what I think? I think I can look back on that now, and the bases (because I've always been trying to figure out why were we taken along on both instances), and I think what it was—Is the public ready to know about UFO and ET phenomena? They wanted to see how we reacted."

When I spoke to him, Bill was obviously in a different mood. And he tells me, adamantly, it all happened because he had a security clearance. Getting as angry as he got made me made me feel I was encroaching on territory Bill does not want to examine. Why? Because he had been told not to examine it?

Laurance Rockefeller

There is one more chapter in the Bill Holden story. In 1995 Bill was invited to a gathering sponsored by Laurance Rockefeller and asked to tell about his UFO experiences in the military.

Bill Holden got out of the military in 1977. His 20-year signed confidentiality agreement expired in 1986, but he said nothing about the experiences until 1995, 30 years later. And the only reason, according to Bill, that he did begin speaking about the experiences was because he was invited by Rockefeller to do so.

According to Bill, at no time during the 30 years did he speak to anyone about what he had seen in 1966 in Hawaii and at White Sands, or about the events of 1971 in Florida. He did not speak privately about it; he did not write emails about it; he did not talk on the telephone about it, and he did not give any public speeches about it. That's what Bill says.

The Alisal Ranch

If that is the case, how did Laurance Rockefeller and his staff know about Bill Holden? How did they know who he was and that he had a story to tell? How did they even find him, 18 years after Bill had left the Air Force? Bill says he was self-employed, "in real estate," at that time.

Out of the blue, Bill receives the call from Rockefeller's office. "I was called to that confidential hearing up at Alisal Guest Ranch, and that was a top secret private meeting put on by the Rockefeller Institute and I was flown up under a different name and everything."

When I heard this, I practically hurt myself blurting out my next question:

Bill, did you ask the Rockefeller people why—how did they—?

I have no clue. No clue.

Did you ask, Why me?

No. I just have no clue how I was selected or anything.

Why didn't you ask?

Don't know. I was just glad to be there.

In 1995 Bill Holden is a mature man of 51. He is no longer in the military and required to blindly follow orders. Indeed, he has been out of the military for 18 years. Yet he fails to ask Rockefeller's staff the blatantly obvious questions: Who gave you my name? How do you know I have a story to tell? How did you find me?

Surely this requires more explanation than that Bill's character had not changed since he was 22 years old, that he is still obedient, loyal, trusting, cooperative, and passive. Trusting? Of whom? Rockefeller? It baffles me he does not ask questions about his own life and who has been pulling strings behind the scenes all these years.

Why doesn't he? Is it because he has been told by someone never to ask these questions, never to look below the surface? I think so.

No clue at all

The Alisal Guest Ranch is a luxury resort in Santa Barbara county, California. Bill said Bob Dean was at Alisal, so I called Dean last November. He confirmed Bill attended and said it was not he (Dean) who suggested Bill Holden's name. Dean said he, too, had no clue how Rockefeller knew about Bill Holden. We discussed the Alisal meeting:

Alisal is not the Rockefeller meeting people in the UFO community know about. The meeting people know about is the 1993 meeting at the JY ranch.

Yes. Bootsy Galbraith was there, at Alisal. Sandra Bowen was there, and Rockefeller's chief of staff, a guy named Alexander. I also remember the Soviet deputy minister of the interior. That was impressive. He came with six bodyguards.

Was Tim Good there?

No.

Wendelle Stevens?

I believe Wendelle was there. The Soviet, I was surprised they let him have a visa to come to a meeting like that. It was a lot of money and Rockefeller paid for it.

Do you remember what it was in Bill Holden's background they wanted him to discuss?

Bill worked on Air Force One, and he tells a story that the president, and I don't remember which president—

JFK.

Was it JFK? Bill also went along on a trip at an airstrip at some air base where apparently there were aliens present.

How did the Rockefeller people know who Bill Holden was?

Elaine, Rockefeller had connections in government all over the place. His money opened doors for him and he had inside connections. Laurance had professional military active duty people who were providing him information. So the information about Holden came from probably reputable sources.

Well, I didn't think they were disreputable, but they came from somewhere, and it wasn't Holden.

John Peterson created and owns the Arlington Institute in Washington, DC—a think tank that trains admirals and generals. He was inside. He was part of the inside connection for a long time. He knows the truth.¹⁰

What made you bring up John Peterson?

You asked where information was coming from and who was doing the talking. I miss Rockefeller.

So obviously—and it is “obvious” isn't it?—that Bill Holden and the protocols used with him had a celebrity of which Bill was completely unaware, because decades later somebody remembered and informed Rockefeller about Bill Holden. Obviously, they told Rockefeller “This man has conscious recollections with this content. You should invite him.”

Acquiescent to abductions

It is not necessary, I think, to reiterate that what the government did with Bill Holden, in 1966 and later, was purposeful. Not by accident, the US government revealed to Bill Holden the most important national security information the government has.

Among these items of information, what was revealed in 1971 is the most telling: with the casual comment, “Just to put your mind at rest, Airman Holden. . . ,” the interrogators informed Bill the United States is acquiescent to the abductions.

Doesn't this suggest the government felt entirely confident the information was safe with Bill Holden? And that suggests the government had control of Bill Holden, even though we do not see the controls, and Bill did not see the controls.

What kind of controls?

The nature of these controls we can only dimly perceive. I have called it “activity behind the scenes.” I have called it “experiments,” “a program of mind control,” “protocols,” “tests,” “elaborate psychological programs.” I don't know what to call it!

The information was safe with Bill Holden because Bill Holden was not free. He may be free today, but he was not then. He was not free to think, not free to question, not free to reason. I have often noted this impact upon abductees subjected to the psychological conditioning the aliens inflict on the abductees.¹¹ The case of Bill Holden suggests the US government has learned how to achieve, apparently, the same result. From my interview with Bill:

On the way back, on any of these trips, did anyone say, Why were we shown this?

No, we never discussed anything. . .

You must have asked yourself, in your own thoughts, asked yourself, Why was I shown this?

No, I've never questioned that. You're in the military, you do your job.

Do you ask yourself today, Why was I shown this back in 1966?

No, I don't worry about that stuff.

Like Kevin Marks, Bill does not think about it. Of

Why was Bill never shocked by any of it and never curious, or assertive enough to ask questions about it, or even to wonder, possibly with some alarm, why me?

course, as we have seen, Bill does sometimes think, Why me? And so these prohibitions and inhibitions probably wear off over time unless they are reinforced. Both men eventually outed their information, but not for a long time. And Bill was still telling me, last winter, that the reason the government showed him aliens was because he had a security clearance.

Embedded information

Examine closely the following exchange, referring to 1971:

Did [the interrogators] say how they knew the others had been abducted?

No, they didn't, but the military side would probably [have been] the same way I did, which is we were supposed to let our commanders know about the experience, and the rest of them would have called in to the police or sheriff.

Look at Bill's words in green; extract them from the sentence in which they are embedded. He is telling us what one of his orders was. Bill is telling us that when he called his CO to report the abduction, he was acting on post-hypnotic command given him by a government psychiatrist: "You must report to us any time you have contact with them." Of course, I can't be sure of this, but that is how it appears to me.

So Bill's rubric, 'I was in the military; I did what I was told,' is only superficially logical. It is the rationalization behind which is concealed the multitude of times Bill Holden acted in ways a free man would not have acted. His lack of curiosity, his naïve trust, his lack of apprehension, Elaine Douglass is a board member of JAR and has been a UFO researcher since 1985. She is MUFON State Director for Utah and was State Director for Washington, DC for many years. In the 1990s she was an organizer for Operation Right to Know (ORTK), an organization which sponsored public protests against UFO secrecy. She holds a master's degree from MIT in military policy.

With a casual comment, "Just to put your mind at rest, Airman Holden. . .," the interrogators informed Bill the United States is acquiescent to the abductions.

his childlike acceptance, his omission of the question, Why me?—in my judgment, these behaviors are not spontaneous; they are controlled.

The ability of abductees who have been taken by aliens to sweep things under the rug and not question what should be questioned, is legendary. It seems the US government has learned how to achieve the same result. Like the aliens, the government has learned how to take a man's freedom away in such a manner he doesn't even notice it.

Abductees in the military

I wonder if all the abductees who end up in the military are secretly studied and experimented on by the US government. Reportedly, the cover up is so interested in the abductees they are picking abductees up and carrying them off, like the aliens do. According to Melinda Leslie, the government is using a second modality for finding out about abductees: undercover people are sent in who ingratiate themselves with abductees and pose as friends or lovers. For an account of this very kind of event, see Diary of an Abduction, by Angela Thompson Smith.

With this much interest, it seems doubtful the cover up could keep their hands off abductees in the military, a captive population required to follow orders. Could it be Bill Holden's real job during his 15 years in the Air Force was to be studied, tested and experimented upon, and his job as "Steward and Loadmaster" was just something to keep him busy?

Bill Holden is very proud of his security clearances, and I thank and commend him for his military service to our nation. But has Bill Holden or anyone else stopped to think that the government could not, would not, provide valid security clearances to abductees? That is because of implants, listening devices and control devices the aliens put into the bodies of abductees, such as Bill Holden. As the aliens have proudly told some abductees, "We see through your eyes, we hear through your ears."

Security clearance?

Implants neutralize government security, with respect to the aliens, and more than that. They potentially compromise the reliability and loyalty of abductees in government service. With implants the aliens are able to control the behavior of abductees. With implants, abductees wake up in the middle of the night, get in their cars in their pajamas, and drive somewhere without knowing why or where they are going. With implants, abductees are caused to marry and divorce and fall obsessively in love. With implants, abductees find their children missing and they continue on as though nothing were amiss.

Anyone who doubts implants can compromise the behavior of abductees in government service should read Unbroken Promises, by Vance Davis, which recounts the tale of the “Gulf Breeze 6.”

In 1990 six US Army Intelligence Specialists deserted their posts at an Army facility in Germany and returned to the US in anticipation of “Armageddon.” The six, including Davis, were abductees who for a long period prior to the desertion had been subjected to intense psychological manipulation by unknown forces, presumably aliens.

Years ago a woman in Maryland told me that in 1953 a friend in the Army told her military personnel were being “kidnapped” by aliens. I mention this just to put a date on the matter. What that date means to me is the US government became aware of alien abductions well before the UFO community did, and early on the US must have looked for ways to screen for and discover abductees in all the agencies where secrecy matters, including the military and intelligence agencies and beyond.

Today a significant literature on US government “mind control” programs and MILABS is emerging which suggests secret US mind control programs, in my view probably inspired by alien abductions, may have moved well beyond some presumed initial concern with “security.”

A large topic, that, and our topic here is Bill Holden. If implants can compromise the behavior of abductees, then why did the Air Force put Bill Holden on the same aircraft with John F. Kennedy in 1962?

Either the Air Force did not yet know of Holden’s involvement with aliens, or else the program of experimentation the Air Force and the coverup were running on Bill Holden left them confident they had control of him.

The Kennedy question is no different from the question of why did the government disclose deep secrets of the UFO coverup to Bill Holden? They were confident they had control over him.

After the Gulf Breeze 6 ran amuck by deserting their top secret intelligence jobs in Europe, the Army offered them all Honorable Discharges, or—let this sink in—they could be re-instated in their former intelligence positions in Germany. In other words, they could re-instated, or instated, into whatever those programs I can’t find words for that the government is running with the abductees.

It is all very disturbing, isn’t it?

A great story from Bill Holden!

There are days when Bill Holden doesn’t take any s---! And this day, in 1997, was one of them. In her interview, Kerry Cassidy of Project Camelot asked Bill, “Have you had any kind of threats since you’ve been speaking publicly?” Bill’s answer:

One time only. I had come back from my, uh, talk in San Diego and this was in 1996. [No,] it had to be ‘97 because I’m living in Victorville. And, uh, this black Ford pulls up in front. This guy about six feet two, all black, gets out of the car, comes up to the door, and I open the door and he says, “Mr. Holden?” and I said, “Yes.”

And he said, “I highly suggest and recommend that you change your public speaking subject.”

I said, “Do you have a warrant for my arrest, or a presidential order, or something telling me that I can’t speak publicly any more?”

“No,” he said.

I said, “Sir, then I suggest you go back to your car and tell whoever told you to come here to stay out of my business unless they’ve changed the Constitution where it says I have the freedom of speech and the liberty and the right to go where I wanna go, and do what I wanna do. OK?”

And he took a step toward me, and at that time I pulled out something from behind my back and I said, “You have about three seconds to get to your car, and I’m serious.” So he turned around and I’ve never heard anything since.

“You have about three seconds to get to your car,” Bill told him.

⁶ Established 1943, Peterson Field, now Peterson AF Base, is located in Colorado Springs, Colo. The facility is home to the North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) and it supports the US Air Force Academy. In 1982 control of the facility was given to the US Air Force Space Command.

⁹ Est. 1950, Patrick AF Base is located in Cocoa Beach, Florida. Originally named the AF Missile Test Center, it supported missile and space programs in the 1960s. In 1990, control of the facility was transferred to the AF Space Command, which manages all unmanned launches from the nearby Cape Canaveral AF Station.

Correction of error from JAR 3 and JAR 4

From the JAR 3 and JAR 4 article, “Don’t apply for a job at the CIA. . . ,” by Elaine Douglass, a footnote to the article indicates Shoney’s Motel was “probably located at the 5000 block of Springvalley Road” in Tyson’s Corner, Va.

It has now been determined that the correct location of the motel was 1587 Spring Hill Road in Tyson’s Corner. This corrected information is according to an old telephone book consulted by the Fairfax County Library.
