CHINA TO FOLLOW USA ON UFO DISCLOSURE

Interview with Linda Moulton Howe © 2004

"The Chinese told me over and over again of the amount of evidence they have from which they conclude that the ET phenomenon is real, in the sense that there are real tangible craft penetrating their airspace."

– C.B. Scott Jones, Former US Naval Intelligence officer, Special Assistant in UFO Research, Founder of the Center for Applied Anomalous Phenomena (1985) and Human Potential Foundation (1989) and Peace and Emergency Action Coalition for Earth (PEACE) (2003)

C.B. Scott Jones worked in US Naval Intelligence from the 1960s to the 1970s.

From 1985 until 1991, Scott worked as a Special Assistant for US Senator Claiborne Pell, then Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Scott's goal was to find out what other governments and scientists knew about the UFO phenomenon. At the top of his research list were the Soviet Union and China and the implied knowledge of German rocket scientist, Dr Werner von Braun.

Dr von Braun began his work in the United States after World War II under Project Paperclip in which German rocket experts were brought to America to create a space rocket program similar to what they had been doing in Peenemünde, Germany. Their base of operations was White Sands Missile Range, west of Alamogordo and Roswell, New Mexico. Von Braun served from 1960 to 1970 as the first Director of the Marshall Space Flight Center. He was most noted for directing the development of the giant Saturn V rocket that carried men to the Moon for the first time in 1969.

Scott Jones thinks that Dr Werner von Braun not only knew about the extraterrestrial presence and rapidly flying discs over their White Sands rocket experiments, but that Dr von Braun seemed to have insider knowledge about how the ET presence might be manipulated and used by the United States government.

– Linda Moulton Howe

C.B. Scott Jones (CBSJ): We absolutely know that our country, the United States, has a determined policy of secrecy, silence, denial and misinformation on this [UFO phenomenon]. So, the big question for me and many others is: "Why?"

Linda Moulton Howe (LMH): Isn't that why a focus on Werner von Braun, going back into the 1940s and Project Paperclip in the United States is important, because he seemed to provide some insights about why this government might perpetuate a policy of silence, when he knew for a fact that we were dealing with something that fell into the non-human category?

CBSJ: Yes, the basis for the Werner Von Braun comment was about 20 years ago [1984]. This was after he had been in the US a long time and actually was in the twilight of his life—he was a dying person. A protégé he had selected, Carol Rosin, gave this information in an interview. He told Carol that he had been in meetings in which the US UFO strategy, the corporate strategy—and it's alleged that it wasn't just his corporation which was Fairchild, but a conglomerate—was this: "We need adequate enemies".

It is essential to keep the income pump for the military-industrial complex primed and going to make sure that we have adequate enemies. He ticked off to Carol that essentially here is the list. Watch for this:

- first, the Soviet Union, but that will collapse;
- then terrorism and crazies in other countries;
- then asteroids; and
- then extraterrestrials.

That's an extraordinary list and I must say that on reflection that everything on that list has already been mentioned as a potential enemy or threat by the United States, except extraterrestrials to this point [in 2004 at time of the original interview].

Foreign Assignments

LMH: In the work that you did with Senator Claiborne Pell, where you were assigned to explore the world to find out what was going on with research in other governments' efforts to understand whatever this phenomenon is, did you find there were other countries—maybe China, Russia, France—who were ready to disclose what they knew and the United States was the only obstacle between their saying to the world public, "We know we are not alone"?

CBSJ: That intrigued me, what I ran into. First of all, when I first went into the Soviet Union—this was before their bloodless revolution—the scientists that I dealt with and the research directors I talked to knew they were going to have a revolution.

And they literally offered me stacks of their classified reports. We would have huge stacks of their reports over years of their official government involvement, and the funding for that came from the Ministry of Defence and their intelligence community, the KGB and the GRU. And they identified their sources of funding to me because they were interested—I think for the obvious reason—first of all to ascertain if this [UFOs and ETs] was something coming from NATO, from the United States? Were these things that were penetrating their airspace still another threat to their national security, and a provocation?

I think they very quickly realised that they could determine the difference between a U2 and naval aircraft penetrating their borders and then later on other satellite and aircraft when they came online, versus the ETs and the UFOs that came over. I asked them, "What do you think is the motivation? What is the intent of these intrusions, not only in your country, but around the world?" They confessed they had no idea what the intention was.

Soviet Radar Tracks UFOs

LMH: But it underscores that this is a global phenomenon, that it is being seen by thousands of people around the planet in an ongoing basis in every country. Can you describe what you learned from what you called "the bear of a scientist" in Russia?

CBSJ: That was interesting. Since I was working for Senator

[Claiborne] Pell—who was then Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee—that gave me entrée to places around the world. The title he had given me was "Special Assistant" and no one ever asked what that really meant, which was fine. But they obviously made their own assumptions as to what the Special Assistant to the Chairman of the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee was. So, perhaps they were overgenerous in sharing things, but I certainly appreciated whatever their expectations were.

I was frequently used as a messenger boy in every country that I went to, because they knew of my relationship with Senator Pell; the Russians less than the Chinese. The Chinese did it repeatedly.

If they had a heartburn that they wanted eased, they would say, "Look, when you get back to Washington, we want you to tell Senator Pell this and let's clean this up or have that stopped or get this going." It was easy for me to say I was glad to do that and that kept the relationship warm and ongoing.

I was in the Institute of Theoretical Problems and the Director told me late one afternoon, "Tomorrow there is going to be something new to the agenda. A very senior scientist, a hero of the Soviet Union, wants to meet with you."

I asked, "What does he want to meet about?"

Now, we had been meeting for two days on the subject of UFOs at that time.

He said, "He will tell you."

He was a huge man and when he swept into the room, his presence just took over and people pulled back from him. I held my ground as best I could and he got right up in my face and it was a finger-pointing monologue on his part. He was telling me that the anti-ballistic missile treaty that had just been completed was completely unfair, and our insistence that the Soviet Union take down a large phased-array radar was not justified.

He said, "This is an important radar. It is technically not in violation."

And I said, "I can imagine that you are upset as a scientist and I imagine the military is upset because your diplomats gave it away."

And he agreed with that.

So I asked him, "What do you want me to do?"

And he said, "I want you to tell Senator Pell how unfair and how unnecessary and wrong this is."

I did that when I got back to Washington. I told my boss and he said, "Let's go to the [Senate Foreign Relations] Committee." So, I told the Soviet experts on the committee about this and they just shrugged and said they didn't know what he was so mad about.

It was some time later... actually I was reviewing my notes. I tried to take notes while I was there because so much was going on and I thought it would be poor form to have a tape recorder. So I would take notes and scribble as I did. So I was reviewing the notes and while I had hired a good technical translator, I was confident that he was as good as he was advertised to me, [I wondered if] I had missed the translation? Or the translator had missed something? And I think the message from the hero scientist of the Soviet Union... you put it together. He knew where I was and he knew what we had been talking about for two days.

LMH: UFOS...

CBSJ: That's right. So I don't think he came principally to talk about a phased-array radar in any other context other than UFOs. And I think what the translation should have been is how important that radar is to us—the Soviet Union and the United States.

And if I had had my wits about me, I should have asked: "What is the frequency rate of this radar picking up UFOs?"

I think then he would have answered the question. He assumed that I was smart and would figure it out. I think he would have dialogued with me if I had brought that up.

Werner von Braun

Tracking UFOs by Frequencies?

LMH: Are we tracking certain frequencies that we know are linked to very specific kinds of extraterrestrial aerial craft?

CBSJ: Linda, I don't know technically whether we are or not. If in fact they emanate on a frequency spectrum that we can monitor, the answer certainly must be "Yes". But I suspect there may be frequencies in spectrums we don't recognise. It might be a dimensional thing and I don't think we know how to check for frequencies in this dimension and then shift to another dimension to check for frequencies there.

China Waits for US Disclosure

LMH: What was the most provocative information that you ran into in China?

CBSJ: The Chinese can be very direct, bless them for that. They just simply told me it was "an outrageous and transparent lie that you come to China and allege that you don't know what your own country is doing in these [UFO] fields." Essentially, "How dare you go to our people in the military attaché and our embassy in Washington, DC, and say you would like to meet senior people in the following academies and institutes, who are doing the important research in UFOs and psychic phenomena, unless you have a responsibility and knowledge of what your own country was doing with such research."

I was never able to convince them that I was not among the anointed. That kept me away from their most senior people, whom I knew and identified. But they simply would not let me get to them.

I guess the important thing with the Chinese came from the Minister of Foreign Affairs. In a casual moment, he lamented how sad he was that the exchange of information between our countries on the subject of UFOs had stopped.

I said, "I am not familiar with that exchange. What are the additional details?"

Then I think he realised he should not have said what he did, and he sort of mumbled his way out of it.

The reason this is important is... I think it has been somewhat validated by the extraordinary 1999 report that came out of France [COMETA] in which they say in one part of the report that there is an allegation that there is a special relationship between the United States and whatever this phenomenon is. The Chinese told me over and over again of the amount of evidence they have from which they conclude that the ET phenomenon is real, in the sense that there are real tangible craft penetrating their airspace. That issue is essentially settled with them.

I said, "This being the case, why don't you make a public announcement and tell the world about this reality?"

And there was a short silence and he said, "China will be a quick second after the United States makes the announcement."

That again suggests there is a belief or understanding that the responsibility for the first announcement comes from the United States. And I don't understand this, Linda. I do not know what the basis of this is."

About C.B. Scott Jones

C.B. Scott Jones, PhD is founder and president of the Peace and Emergency Action Coalition for Earth. The principal work of PEACE is to implement pilot programs jointly developed with the extraterrestrial spiritual hierarchy of Earth. He was co-founder and president of the Human Potential Foundation, established in 1989 to conduct research into all conditions of humankind: physiological, psychological and spiritual, to assist the individual to achieve the highest levels of human potential in body, mind and spirit in order to compete and cooperate at personal excellence throughout life.

Prior to this position, Scott Jones was Special Assistant to Senator Claiborne Pell from January 1985 until March 1991. Retiring as a Commander in the US Navy, approximately half of his thirty-year naval career was spent in the intelligence service overseas and in the USA. In post-navy careers he taught at university level and worked in the private sector research and development community involved in US-government-sponsored projects for the Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, US Army Intelligence and Security Command, and more.

As Assistant Naval Attaché and Naval Air Attaché to New Delhi, India and Kathmandu, Nepal from January 1965 to June 1967, he was involved in intelligence collection and provided intelligence support to defence attachés throughout Southeast Asia, the Middle East and North Africa. This tour was followed by assignment to the Naval Scientific and Technical Intelligence Center where, as Head of the Missiles, Ordnance, and Astronautics Division, he directed the production of technical intelligence reports for the Navy and Defense Intelligence Agency at all classification levels. During this period he was Chairman of the Naval Missile Group, an interagency group that supported the Guided Missile and Astronautic Intelligence Committee. As Chief of the Navy's Intelligence Anti-Ship Missile Task Force, he directed the effort that provided intelligence support for a critical anti-ship missile defence research and development effort. He was a briefer to the President's Scientific Advisory Committee, and testified before House and Senate committees and subcommittees.

Other intelligence assignments include three years as Chief of the Targets Development Branch in the Intelligence Directorate Headquarters, US European Command, and in intelligence-related assignment in the National Military Command System Support Center in Washington, DC.
