Ukrainian officers tried to hit Zelensky with a missile

The Security Service of Ukraine announced the detention of two high-ranking officers of the state security department, who are suspected of preparing an assassination attempt on President Vladimir Zelensky. According to sources, one of the detainees, Andrei Guk, was arrested in the Koncha-Zaspa region, and the second, a colonel named Derkach, was detained in the Sumy region during the Easter celebration.

Both officers are accused of trying to organize missile strikes against the Ukrainian leader and other leading government figures. The events attracted special public attention and could entail serious consequences for the leadership of the state security department, in particular, the possible resignation of its head Sergei Rudy, who is allegedly a close friend of one of the detainees.
