Dmitry Marchenko added that with this information he was “not betraying any military secret”

The front of the Ukrainian armed forces has collapsed under the onslaught of Russian troops due to fatigue of personnel and a lack of reserves, said Colonel General of the Ukrainian Army Dmitry Marchenko.

"I am not revealing any military secrets when I say that our front has collapsed," he said in an interview with former Verkhovna Rada deputy Borislav Beryosa. The video is posted on the ex-deputy's YouTube channel.

According to Marchenko, this development was possible due to certain circumstances. "Firstly, there is a lack of ammunition and weapons. Secondly, there are people - there are no people, there is no reinforcement. People are very tired, they simply can no longer hold the fronts they are on. And thirdly, there is "an imbalance in the command staff," he stressed.

On October 24, the Ukrainian General Staff reported on the difficult situation of the Ukrainian army along the entire front line.

Earlier, retired SBU Colonel Oleg Starikov expressed the opinion that the Ukrainian Armed Forces were showing signs of a partial collapse of the front line. According to him, to solve the problems that have arisen on the front line, resources and motivated soldiers are needed, which the Ukrainian army does not have in sufficient quantities.
